ALL LOOK ALIKE TO JUDGE LANDIS

Denies Request of Attorney Miller For Recall of Subpoena For John D. Rockefeller

OIL KING MUST COME INTO HIS COURT

Chicago, June 28.—Judge Landis in the United States district court today refused to withdraw the subpoena issued for John D. Rockefeller, although Johns S. Miller, attorney for the Standard Oil company, urgently requested the court to do so.

Mr. Miller informed the court that Mr. Rockefeller, although president of the Standard Oil company of Indiana, was not possessed of the information regarding the financial condition of the Standard Oil company desired by the court. He also informed the court that Mr. Rockefeller was an old man and had many business cares and that no advantage could be gained by any person by bringing him into court.

Landis Turned Him Down.

The request of the attorney did not appeal to Judge Landis, for he promptly refused to recall the subpoena, and in addition directed that subpoenas be issued for the vice president and secretary-treasurer of the Union Tank line.

At the opening of court today Attorney Miller went to the rooms of District Attorney Sims and said that he had a matter which he would like to present to Judge Landis in relation to the Standard Oil case. He was accompanied to the chambers of Judge Landis by the district attorney. "I have some suggestions to make," said Mr. Miller to the judge. "I should like to say that I am willing to furnish the district attorney with the names of men who are in a position to give the information wanted by the court in regard to the financial resources and holdings of these companies. The subpoenas that have been issued are chiefly for men who cannot give the details desired by the court. It seems much more advisable to hear the statements of men who know about the things instead of bringing eight or ten men here without the information.

What Provoked the Jolt.

"Mr. Rockefeller has little to do with the active management of the business and it seems useless as well as a burden to bring him here. He is an old man and quite wealthy and has a great many financial holdings and it will be a hardship and difficulty for him to come here."

"It is conceivable that the president of one company does not know whether or not it owns another company," replied Judge Landis. "I want to know whether the Standard Oil company of New Jersey owns the Stanard Oil company of Indiana, the defendant in this case. I want this information and all that I have asked for, and I intend to have it if such a thing is possible."

All Look Alike to the Judge.

"This court makes no distinction as far as its process goes against either a wealthy or a poor man," continued Judge Landis. "I want Mr. Rockefeller here to learn from him whether the Standard Oil company of New Jersey owns the Standard Oil company of Indiana. I want to learn that one thing from him and other things that he may be able to tell."

Mr. Miller said he was unable to say whether or not any of the men summoned would furnish any of the information wanted, even if they knew it, and intimated that they might decline to answer by advice of counsel.

"The court cannot assume," said Judge Landis, "that such an attitude will be taken by the witnesses summoned and I cannot give them an opportunity to decline by counsel in advance. If they see fit not to answer my questions they will be given all the chance they want, to decline in open court. These subpoenas will be served and I shall not interfere with the service of any of them."

Mean Fling by Attorney.

"The issuing of subpoenas for Mr. Rockefeller and Mr. Rogers borders on sensationalism anyway," said Mr. Miller, and he intimated that it was done through the office of the district attorney.

"The district attorney's office is not responsible," said Judge Landis. "I alone am responsible for this action. I want the information I have asked for and I intend to have it. It should have been forthcoming before this time, without all this trouble."

The court then directed that subpoenas be issued for H. R. Paine, vice president of the Union Tank line, and for W. H. Hutchinson, the secretary

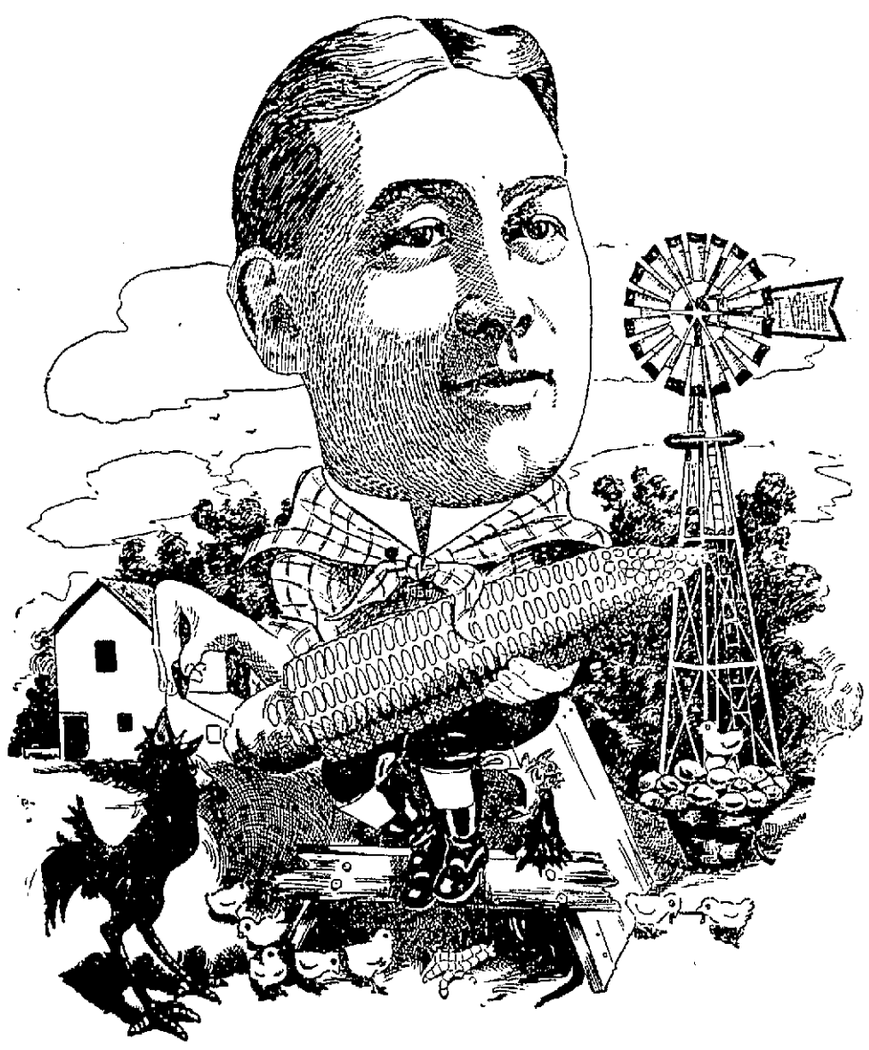
MEN OF AFFAIRS IN FORT WAYNE



MR. CHARLES G. PAPE.

Charlie has some fancy hens; likewise some fancy roosters;
Of fancy poultry raising he's chief of all the boosters.
And all the hens love Charlie so it makes the roosters jealous;
He feeds them so and pets them, oh! he certainly is zealous.
When Charlie isn't incubating choice and fuzzy chicks,
He's fashioning devices to play the wind some tricks.
In every clime beneath the sun his aerial engines reel,
Which shows man may get there even if he have a wheel.

TAYLOR UNIVERSITY IS NOW A STATE INSTITUTION

Grounds, Buildings, and All Chattels Attached—The Muddle Complicated.

Upland, Ind., June 28.—Taylor university is a state institution today. It will remain so until the rights of property are determined in court. Trustees T. W. Williams, T. J. Deeren and O. L. Stout filed an affidavit before Justice Hicks for an order of attachment, and the goods, chattels, books, papers, type plates, mailing list and all other effects, including the biuldings and grounds, are now in the charge of Marshal Nickerson and a guard is on the ground under the direction of J. W. Presby.

The library had been carried from the university building and the institution was in process of being sacked by the seceders when the law was invoked. The University Register, which contained a tirade against Upland, was confiscated just as it was ready to be mailed.

President Winchester, who has gone east, has sent in his resignation.

LONE BANDIT GOES INTO LOS ANGELES TO OPERATE

"Black Jack" Holds Up Street Car and Sends Police Chief a Defi.

Los Angeles, Cal., June 28.—In plain view of many pedestrians an uncaptured highwayman, well known to the police of many cities, under the alias of "Black Jack" last night held up a car on the Sixth and Rampart street line, relieving the conductor of a watch and $30 in cash, and sending to the chief of police a defiant message announcing his presence in the city and bidding him look out for further hold-ups. The robber was masked and carried a revolver.

NEW RATE LAW HITS WHEAT GROWERS IN KANSAS

Cannot Import Hands for the Fields as Formerly Was Done.

Topeka, Kan., June 28.—T. B. Gerow, director of the free employment bureau of Kansas, yesterday sent a letter to E. E. Clark, a member of the interstate commerce commission, formally protesting against the manner in which he asserts the Hepburn bill has destroyed the former effective plans of sending out harvest hands into Kansas.

"Heretofore we have been able to send five men in a party at low rate," wrote Mr. Gerow. "Now we must have a party of fifteen. Further than that, pay agents are sending them from depots to places where they are not wanted. Farmers are telegraphing me about the trouble in getting men. We cannot afford to have our wheat crop destroyed in this manner. I wish to make my protest now."

BRIDE WAS ROBBED OF RICH MARRIAGE GIFTS

Woman Married in Presence of Royalty Relieved of Valuables.

Victoria, B. C., June 28.—A sensational robbery was discovered here last night following the arrival of Mr. and Mrs. Victor Alexander G. Elliott, who were married in the presence of royalty at Westminister on May 6. The groom, who is a son of the dean of Windsor and a godson of the late Queen Victoria, gave to his wife, who was Miss Daisy Langley, of Victoria, a large number of jewels and family heirlooms valued at $10,000, including miniatures of the late Queen Victoria, and lockets enclosing locks of hair of the late queen.

The couple left England by the steamer Empress of Britain on June 14, and the valuables mysteriously disappeared enroute from a locked dispatch box placed inside a secured trunk.

TELL OF THE TOUGH STRIKE TIMES IN COLORADO

Interesting But Irrelevant Testimony Given in the Haywood Trial.

Boise, Idaho, June 28.—William Easterly, who was one of the leaders of the great Cripple Creek strike and whom Harry Orchard connects with some of the violence in Cripple Creek, was recalled to the stand at the Steunenberg trial this morning and continued his testimony in behalf of William D. Haywood. Easterly directly denied Orchard's testimony that reflects upon him, and swore that in the fall of 1903 he heard Orchard threaten to kill Steunenberg.

On cross-examination the state strongly attacked Easterly for remaining silent after he knew Orchard, as Thomas Hogan, had killed Steunenberg and not speaking until Orchard made a confession implicating the Western Federation of Miners.

Easterly left the stand at 11:30. In the re-direct examination he made one or two changes in the answers in the cross-examination.

THE PROCEEDINGS.

Boise, Idaho, June 28.—When court opened this morning in the Haywood case Dr. McGee was recalled by the state for cross-examination.

Dr. McGee had testified that he saw Harry Orchard in the Coeur d'Alenes in 1904 only in company with a man named Cunningham, to whom Orchard claims to have given the Peabody bomb. The prosecution today wanted Dr. McGee to describe Cunningham. The witness said he had seen the man but twice and then they almost came to blows over a political discussion.

"Was Cunningham a stout man?" asked Mr. Hawley of the state.

"We did not get that far," replied the witness.

"Did he have a mustache?"

In Doubt of Mustache; Certain of Gun.

"I don't know, but he had a gun."

Following Dr. McGee, Easterly was called. Easterly denied that he had ever talked with Orchard as to the Independence depot explosion. Orchard was at Cripple Creek the latter part of 1903 and the first of 1904. "He mined a little," said the witness, "but he was quite a fiend at card games. He seldom worked more than a month at a time."

Easterly asserted that during the Cripple Creek strike days there was never any talk of violence at the meetings of the union except by a visiting member. The visitor proved afterward to be a secret service man in the employ of the mine owners. The labor leaders always counseled peace, saying that any disorders which might occur would be attributed to the union.

Easterly said he was arrested at Cripple Creek, "as a matter of mili-

HARVARD FRESHMEN SAVE BIT OF GLORY

Win the Eight, But Yale's Four Gives Crimson One More Humbling.

New London, Conn., June 28.—Harvard won the freshman eight by one and a half lengths and Yale the varsity four-oared race by perhaps ten lengths on the morning tide on the Thames river today and the result confirmed predictions.

Coming with the great victory, a Yale varsity eight last night, the win of the four today was a source of gratification to Yale men and an evidence of the efficiency of Coach Kennedy's training. It was an easy race for the blue to win, while the freshman race was a hard one for Yale to lose and correspondingly a triumph for the Cambridge youngsters. The races were worth the seeing, although a mere remnant of the host of yesterday had the courage to stay over for them.

Both races were up stream on the incoming tide in smooth water and both were rowed in slow time. It was Harvard strength in the freshmen and lack of it in the four-oared which made the results as they were.

The official times of the races were: Freshman, Harvard, 11:15; Yale, 11:19.

WHITE WINGS WILL STRIKE OUT OF SYMPATHY

Go to the Support of the New York Garbage Cart Drivers Now Out.

New York, June 28.—A sympathetic strike of two thousand street sweepers is threatened today if the street cleaning department does not accede to the demands of the striking garbage cart drivers. The health of the city of New York is being seriously menaced by the great piles of garbage which lie rotting in the streets of the east side. Dr. Darlington, of the health board started an investigation today. Several physicians have already reported that much illness is being caused by filth in the streets.

The striking garbage men have been on strike three days and unless they return in two days they will be automatically discharged.

TELEGRAPHERS OUT IN FRISCO ARE HOPEFUL

Think Roosevelt's Interference Will End the Big Strike.

San Francisco, June 28.—The belief that the strike of the telegraphers would be of short duration has been strengthened and a spirit of optimism prevails among the operators. The prospect that President Roosevelt may take a hand in adjusting the differences tended to brighten the situation.

The appearance of the president of the United States in the controversy was suggested by a telegram sent by S. J. Konenkamp, deputy president of the Commercial Telegraphers Union of America, in New York, to President Small.

The telegram stated that Konenkamp had been invited by Labor Commissioner Neill to visit him in Washington to discuss the situation. President Small says that he will welcome any official investigation of the strike.

No New Men Put to Work.

No new men, it is said, were put to work yesterday either by the Western Union or Postal companies. General Superintendent L. W. Storer, of the Postal, declared that he did not need any more men, although he admitted that the force was not as large as before the strike.

"We are working a little harder and putting in overtime besides," he explained. "The volume of our business has not reached a normal level yet."

Superintendent Miller, of the Western Union, said that the company had about seventy men on the floor of the Oakland office against ninety or one hundred before the strike.

Both officials declared that their companies were handling all their business without delay.

The strikers scoff at this statement and declare it is a physical impossibility for the companies to cope with their work.

GAVE TRACKMEN A HEARING.

United Commercial Travelers Will Keep Out of Fight.

Columbus, Ohio, June 28.—The supreme council of the Order of United Commercial Travelers of America, in their twentieth annual session, gave some time today to the hearing of a representative of the National Railway Trackmen's association, which organization is waging a campaign to force railroads to put their tracks in better physical condition.

The supreme council, according to the officers, will take no formal action as it does not propose to be drawn into any conference between a railroad and its employes. The fight is opened upon the Missouri Pacific as the opening wedge. Important committee reports were heard today.

HE WARNS AGAINST TAKING JAPAN CHEAPLY

American Missionary Says Mikado Has Standing Army of Million.

San Francisco, June 28.—Rev. Henry C. Mable, general secretary of the American Baptist Mission union, who arrived on the Korea yesterday, has been on a four months' tour of the orient inspecting the mission stations. He gave careful study to the Japanese question and says that Americans should be warned against underestimating Japan's strength.

"They have a standing army of a million men," he said, "and their drill work is not the performance of perfunctory evolutions. They go at it in the greatest earnestness. Every day of their lives they are put through jiu jitsu exercises and the result is a stocky, straight set up soldier, as square cut and trim as the English 'Tommy Atkins' ever was. No nation can afford to hold the Japanese efficiency or valor in contempt. Japan is prepared, if need be, to defend her honor and dignity before the world if a crisis comes. There is an increasing feeling beneath the surface of uneasiness and sensitiveness in regard to our immigration policy and the treatment of her subjects. It is not so manifest as reports would endeavor to convey; the thoughtful, substantial men are disposed to be patient and to trust to the good intentions of our country and our officials for an amicable adjustment of the difficulties with regard to their rights. But there is less of the bumptious and threatening in their attitude than one would expect. It was really surprising that they have not shown a more challenging disposition after their success in arms in the Russian war."

BANKERS COMPLAIN OF THE EXPRESS COMPANIES

Express Companies Are Charged With Usurping Bankers' Prerogatives.

Washington, June 28.—One of the most important cases yet filed with the interstate commerce commission under the new railroad rate law, was presented today by the American Bankers' association.

In brief, the complainant alleges that the express companies of the United States, through the power and facilities as common carriers are usurping the prerogatives of the banking associations and at the same time are using the capital of the banks of the country in the conduct of their business.

It is alleged that the operations of the express companies in the conduct of their exchange business is seriously detrimental to the interests of the banks and that the use of the interstate facilities and the relations which the express companies have with the railroads enable the companies seriously to discriminate against regular commercial operations of banking institutions.

The Southern Express company is included in the companies.

GREAT STEEL TRUST ORGANIZING IN BRITAIN

Will Combat Competition of American and German Concerns.

London, June 28.—A great combination of iron and steel manufacturers, similar to those existing in the United States and Germany, is in course of formation in Great Britain, with the avowed object of combatting American and German competition, which is increasing yearly.

The London representatives of the American companies, however, do not anticipate any material cut in their orders as a result of the movement.

The combined capital of the firms is over $130,000,000.

It is pointed out that it is extremely difficult to complete such a combination in England, as it is necessary to make public all deals with reference to them to the shareholders of the various companies.

MOB TOOK HIM.

Alexandria, La., June 28.—Following an assault on a white girl near Ruby, a small town fifteen miles southwest of here, a negro who had been arrested and identified by the girl, was taken from a deputy sheriff by a mob while being brought to this place for safekeeping last night. The officer, who was driven off by the mob, reached Alexandria this morning and reported the matter.

MAY PROVOKE FRESH TROUBLE WITH JAPAN

Frisco Japs Not Allowed to Renew Permits for Intelligence Offices.

San Francisco, June 28.—The board of police commissioners yesterday denied the application of five Japanese for the privilege of renewing their permits to keep intelligence offices in this city and refused two Japanese applicants who desired to obtain new permits for the same business, on the ground that the applicants were not citizens of the United States and that heretofore the policy of the board had been always to give the preference in these privileges to citizns, against those who are not and cannot become citizens.

It had been urged on behalf of the petitioners that they were entitled to the privilege by virtue of the provisions of the treaty, but the police commission contends that if such right does exist it is still subject to laws enacted under the general police powers of the state concerning police and sanitary regulations. A refusal to grant such permits is not, according to the construction of the board, a violation of the right to trade.

President Hagerty, in giving the decision on the board, said that it was the policy of the board to grant such permits only to citizens of the United States and not to citizens of foreign countries, and he further suggested that the refusal to grant these permits would open the way for a determination in court of the extent of the rights of Japanese in this respect under the treaty between the United States and Japan, should the applicants desire to take the matter into court.

STANDARD OIL JURY UNABLE TO AGREE AT FINDLAY

Long Drawn Out Case Ends in Mistrial for the Big Octopus.

Findlay, Ohio, June 28.—The jury in the case of the state of Ohio against the Standard Oil company, charged with violating the anti-trust laws, this morning reported to Judge Duncan that it had been found impossible to agree on a verdict. The court thereupon ordered the jury discharged.

According to rumor the jury, when it first retired, stood six for conviction and six for acquittal. Subsequently it is said the jury stood eight for acquittal and when the disagreement report was brought in the vote stood 7 to 5.

The case was given to the jury on Wednesday last.

LOCAL OPTION LAW IN OHIO HELD VALID

Lawful to Establish Dry Territory in Residential Districts.

Columbus, Ohio, June 28.—The supreme court today in the case of Martin Deering vs. the city of Cincinnati, decided that the Jones local option law, providing for the establishment of dry territory in residential districts of municipalities by petition, is valid. In this the court sustains the judgment of the superior court of Cincinnati. The court will not report the case, but stated in announcing the decision, that the law had been found warranted in the general police powers of the state, but on the other questions presented the court had not been able to concur sufficiently to announce anything more than the law was valid.

ICE WAGON DRIVERS STRIKE.

Two Thousand Men Quit Work In New York City.

New York, June 28.—Fifteen hundred to two thousand drivers of the delivery wagons of the American Ice company went on a strike today to enforce a demand for extra pay for extra work. The depots of the company were stored with ice and its arrival was urgently awaited by thousands of hotels, restaurants, soda fountains and other places where cold drinks are usually dispensed but hardly a wagon of the American Ice company was moved.

FRISCO BROKERS BROKE.

San Francisco, June 28.—Announcement will be made officially on the San Francisco stock and mining exchange today of the suspension of the Kenneth Donnellan company, brokers in San Francisco, Goldfield and Tonopah. Mr. Donnellan said the cause of the trouble was inability to collect from clients for whom he had bought stocks.

SENATOR ALLISON WILL BE A CANDIDATE AGAIN

Dean of Upper Branch of Congress to Run—Washington Letter.

Washington, June 28.—There is general rejoicing here over the statement attributed to Senator Allison that he will be a candidate to succeed himself in the senate. For some time it was feared that the health of the senior senator from Iowa was such that he might decide to return to private life. The fact that he is coming back has given rise to general satisfaction. There is no doubt about his ability to be returned, for his long term of service has been a brilliant one and he has looked vigilantly after the interests of his home state. Senator Allison's decision practically eliminates from the race Governor Cummins, ex-Representative Lacey and others who aspire to the toga. The senator is the dean of the upper house of congress, having been a member of that body since 1873 and having served eight years in the house before that. His present term expires March 3, 1909.

General James H. Baker, of Minnesota, who was commissioner of pensions under President Grant, has been visiting relatives here. He tells a good story of an encounter with an aged man who asked him for money with which to buy a drink. General Baker was waiting for a car, when the old fellow, who noted the G. A. R. button on the general's coat, saluted and made his request, declaring that he had fought in the rebellion. General Baker doubted the man's statement and said so, asking why he wore neither his button nor the uniform. The old man replied that he had an unfortunate appetite for strong drink and that, when going on a spree, he put aside all the insignia for the reason that he did not want to disgrace them. To prove his assertion he produced an old worn envelope out of which he took a pension certificate dated 1873 and bearing General Baker's own signature. He got his pittance.

Dr. Richard D. Harlan, son of Justice Harlan, of the supreme bench, and special representative of the George Washington university, left Washington this week for a tour of investigation abroad. He goes to Paris and London principally, to make a close study of the schools of the political sciences in those cities. The French institution is one of the most noted of its kind in the world. According to Ambassador Juaserand, for the last ten years all appointments made by the French government to the diplomatic or consular service have been, with three exceptions, from graduates of this school. Through following this policy, French commerce has been built up more rapidly in the last decade than ever before in the history of the French republic. The school at present has more than 1,000 students. It is the intention of the George Washington university trustees, who have launched a movement for the nationalization of the university, to adopt the most valuable features found in this Paris school and in the one situated in London. It is the hope of the university authorities to make their new college of the political sciences, which is reorganized this year, the training school for representatives of the United States in foreign countries. This ambition has been applauded by Secretary Root and by John Barrett, director of the Bureau of American Republics. While he is abroad, Dr. Harlan expects to lay the matter before leading members of the American colonies in both the French and English capitals, and believes that he will obtain considerable financial support from those who hope to see the commercial and political prestige of the United States strengthened in foreign lands.

Secretary Wilson, who, as everyone knows, hails from Iowa, is engaged in a pretty feud with F. D. Coburn, secretary of the Kansas Board of Agriculture. The row started two years ago when Secretary Wilson put Kansas in the class of "arid" states. Instantly there was a long howl from every farmer in Kansas and Secretary Coburn promptly issued a pamphlet showing that Kansas produces more stuff than Iowa, and that in the production of wheat and corn combined Kansas leads all the states in the union. This direct jab at Iowa hurt Mr. Wilson, and when the green bug was devastating the Kansas wheat fields recently the secretary of agriculture ignored Secretary Coburn and issued advice to the Kansas farmers direct. This advice was to the effect that the farmers of Kansas should plant turkey red wheat. The secretary said that in 1897 he had made some experiments with this wheat and found that it withstood the ravages of bugs better than any other variety. The advice was contained in the form of a letter, which was published in all the Kansas newspapers. Coburn let it get its widest publicity and then he gave out a statement himself, showing that for the last twenty years Kansas has produced practically no other kind of wheat. Immediately millers and wheat growers all through the country began to poke fun at "Farmer" Wilson for making experiments in 1897 with wheat which Kansas had grown successfully and almost exclusively for a decade prior to that year. This hasn't served to sweeten Secretary Wilson's temper and the war between the head of the agricultural department and the Kansas official promises to be more interesting than ever.

A new plan for connecting the Mississippi with the South Atlantic is now attracting attention. Lewis H. Haupt, a well-known engineer, would construct a ship canal reaching from Cairo, Ill., to Brunswick, Ga. He asserts that this route is only 1,308 miles long and that it would be the shortest and most practicable connection obtainable between the Mississippi valley and the Atlantic coast. Mr. Haupt would utilize a number of the rivers of the south, and thinks that the entire canal could be constructed for $40,000,000. He is confident that it would pay for itself in thirty years. There is not the slightest question of the value of a waterway connection between the middle west and the south. Both sections would benefit by it to a great degree. It would have a direct and immediate effect on railroad rates, something that the National Rivers and Harbors Congress long has pointed out. This organization, however, is not advocating any especial scheme, but is devoting its efforts to furthering the general cause of national waterway betterments. It believes that the federal government should expend $50,000,000 a year in improving the rivers and harbors of the country, and while its efforts have been crowned with considerable success, as is evidenced in the big appropriation bill passed at the last session and the appointment by President Roosevelt of the inland waterways commission, it is endeavoring to keep alive the sentiment already created. Its secretary, Captain J. F. Ellison, of Cincinnati, is striving to bring this about by increasing the membership, which already is large and to be found in every state in the union.

Interesting information concerning the plans and ambitions of Senator LaFollette have been brought to Washington from Wisconsin. According to this information the Badger state is going to indorse the senator for president, and he will go to the republican national convention next year with its twenty-six delegates behind him. There is a string to the delegation, however, for it will be thrown to Roosevelt provided the president reconsiders his refusal to accept a third term. There is one thing, though, that LaFollette will not do, according to the report, and that is support President Roosevelt's choice in the convention. His position may seem rather paradoxical, but it may be explained on the ground that the senator, while willing to vote for Roosevelt for another term, holds a grudge against him personally. He contends that the president has been "knocking" him, and has said so to a number of his personal friends. Mr. Roosevelt, the senator declares, classes him as an extremist and as an unsafe man to have in the white house.

In the appointment of the immigration commission, the administration has taken official notice of the serious labor problem involved in the exodus of nearly 100,000 people in 1906 to Canada, and the strenuous and systematic efforts being made by the Dominion to secure new settlers for the western provinces. The construction of the Grand Trunk Pacific, 3,600 miles in length, alone is requiring an immense number of laborers. The Canadian movement, on top of the unsatisfied requirements of American industry, has made it imperatively necessary that wise stimulation of immigration be taken up, and the newly appointed commission will make a study of this matter immediately, abroad. Until now, Canada has outstripped the United States in its competition for labor. One reason for this lies in the allurements of the rich and fertile lands which are being awakened by the new Grand Trunk Pacific. Already 3,000 people have settled where five years ago no human being could attempt to make a livelihood, and these settlers are said to have found mild winters and delightful climatic conditions.

Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, chief of the government bureau of chemistry, sailed for France this week. When he returns he will find another fight on his hands, and one that will be pushed vigorously. The sugar interests of the south are resentful of the official's statements that the use of molasses is deleterious to health. In order to disprove this assertion, negro prisoners in New Orleans were utilized as subjects for experiments with the treacle. As a result, it is declared, it has been shown that molasses instead of being injurious, builds up the human system, enriches the blood, and aids in the digestion of other foods. It is said that if Dr. Wiley sticks to his decision and puts molasses under the ban, it will mean an annual loss of approximately $5,000,000 to the sugar growers of the south.

YOU cannot afford to neglect your personal appearance. A man's clothes nowadays are a very important factor in his success. The dog that barks at a tramp will invariably wag his tail when a well dressed man passes by, which is a simple demonstration of the fact that the well-dressed man meets with smiles and approval, while the poor dresser invites criticism and unfriendliness. For the balance of the summer you will find nothing quite so stylish and comfortable as one of our up-to-date outing suits.

If you let us take your measure, you will have the choice of more than 400 different patterns in the latest foreign and domestic woolens and our unrestricted guarantee of perfect fit, workmanship, and wearing quality. You owe it to your own best interests to pay us a visit. When you deal with us you py less and dress better.

MAKES WAR ON CIGAR STUMPS.

Temperance Legion Tramples Them to Prevent Boys From Smoking.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., June 28.—It was reported at the convention of the Loyal Temperance legion of this state here yesterday that the heels of members of the legion had during the year trampled into the dust or mud 6,878 cigar stumps. Applause greeted the report. The anti-narcotic division having charge of this work found that urchins smoked a large number of the stumps which they picked out of the streets, and it was decided that the only practical way to prevent this was to destroy the stumps.

KIDNEY DISEASES CAUSE ONE-THIRD OF THE TOTAL DEATHS.

When the Kidneys fail to perform their functions properly by not straining out the poisonous waste matter from the blood as it passes through them, the poisons are carried by the circulation to every part of the body, deranging the different organs. This causes heart trouble, stomach trouble, sluggish liver and a host of other ills, all due to deranged Kidneys.

FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE

corrects irregularities and cures Kidney and Bladder diseases in every form, tones up the whole system, and the diseases that have resulted from disordered Kidneys disappear, because the cause has been removed. Commence taking FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE at the first sign of danger. Do not risk having Bright's Disease or Diabetes.

CURED OF BRIGHT'S DISEASE.

Mr. Robert G. Burke, Elnora, Saratoga Co., N. Y., writes:—I am glad to have an opportunity of telling what magnificent results I have had from using FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE after having tried other advertised medicines and several physicians. Before I began it I had to get up from 12 to 20 times each night to relieve my bladder. I was all bloated up with dropsy and my eyesight was so impaired that I could scarcely see one of my family across the room. In fact, I was so badly used up that I had given up hope of living when I was urged by a friend to try FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE. One 50-cent bottle worked wonders, and before I had taken the third bottle the superfluous flesh had gone, as well as all other symptoms of Kidney trouble. My friends were surprised that I was cured, as they all thought I was going to die. Every few days some one comes from miles away to learn the name of the wonderful medicine that cured me of Bright's Disease, and not one that has tried it has failed to be benefitted.

Mrs. Louis Determan, of Claypool, fell into an open well when the board covering gave way beneath her weight. The well is 35 feet in depth and contains 25 feet of water. The woman clung to the pump stock and in some manner managed to crawl to the surface and save herself from drowning.

So great has become the desire to have the "milk train" service resumed on the B. & O., that people of the towns of Garrett and Walkerton and intermediate points, with patrons of the road from other cities, have formulated and are signing petitions to the general manager of the B. & O., for a resumption of this "milk train."

One of the incidents of the moral crusade now in progess at Elkhart was the arraignment of W. S. Hazelton and Frank A. Sage, officers of different banks, charged with renting a property owned jointly for immoral purposes. Each pleaded guilty and was fined $10. Theodore A. Smith, of Garrett, has sued the Vandalia railroad for $300 which he desires to recover as compensation for building a fence. Smith owns property at Auburn Junction along which the company's line passes. He made a demand that the company build a suitable fence along it and the company refused. Smith constructed the fence himself, and now seeks to collect pay for the work.

Mayor Charles Rigdon, of Warsaw, has a diversity of interests. Elkhart ministers have opened a fight on Police Supt. Charles Silvers. They want him removed from office and have filed charges with Gov. J. Frank Hanly. The charges are general in their nature but it is understood that promises are made by the ministers to furnish the governor with more specific information. Dissatisfaction with the superintendent of police is based chiefly on the belief that the police department has been inactive and ineffective in the suppression of vice in Elkhart.

Dr. M. L. Oiler, who alleges that he is a member in good standing in the Pythian lodge at Russiaville and that the lodge is indebted to him $700 for sick benefits and nurse hire, has brought suit for collection in the Howard superior court. The lodge pleads that the plaintiff is not entitled to relief. Dr. Oiler is a well-to-do practitioner, and he asserts that he is pushing his claim purely as a matter of principle, and he intimates that he will carry it to the court of last resort, if necessary. The Russiaville lodge has a large membership and a well-filled treasury, and the trustees have been instructed to contest the claim, regardless of expense. It is practically certain that the litigation will not end short of the supreme court.

MISTAKES DYSPEPSIA MAY CAUSE

Many Sufferers from Stomach Trouble Notice Derangements of Other Organs and Become Alarmed — Symptoms Disappear When the Stomach Is Toned Up.

Indigestion and stomach trouble show many symptoms that are mistaken for other complaints. The dyspeptic may easily come to believe that he is a sufferer from heart trouble if wind on the stomach causes irregular action of the vital organ. The lungs and kidneys are sometimes affected also by stomach trouble.

Heartburn, hiccough, nightmare and waterbrash, or sour risings in the throat, are all symptoms of stomach disturbance which disappear when the cause is reached and the stomach toned up.

Mrs. W. T. Clark, of 305 West Park street, Rome, N. Y., says: "I had gastritis, which brought on sinking spells for about an hour every morning. I was very weak and nervous and finally was compelled to take to my bed. My illness lasted about four months. For about half the time I was confined to my bed. I suffered greatly from the stomach trouble and nervousness, but what alarmed me most was the sinking feeling at the heart.

"I had read about Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and when some of my friends recommended the pills very highly, I decided to give them a trial. I bought one box and by the time this was used up the sinking spells had ceased. I felt better but continued taking the pills until I had used twelve boxes. I still keep the pills in the house for I believe that they are a splendid medicine. I always recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to my friends who are ailing for I know that they will do all that is claimed for them."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have corrected serious disorders of the stomach, have revitalized the nervous system and restored to health sufferers from severe disorders of the blood and nerves. For rheumatism, indigestion, nervous headaches, many forms of weakness and debility, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are recommended even if ordinary remedies have been tried without relief.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box, six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

WILL WELLMAN FLY TO THE POLE?

Walter Wellman, the celebrated arctic explorer, has a second paper in the July McClure's on the airship trip to the pole which he expects to make in a month. In this article, which he calls "Will the 'America' Fly to the Pole?" he describes his marvelous airship "America" and tells of dozens of ingenious inventions embodied in it that have never before been used by aerial navigators. Some idea of what a gigantic ship the "America" is may be gained by a few of the many proportions and figures he gives: "Its length is 183 feet, and its greatest diameter is 52.5 feet. The steel car underneath it is 115 feet long and from the bottom of this car to the top of the gas reservoir the distance is 65 feet, the height of a four-story house. The surface of the gas reservoir or balloon is 24,000 square feet, or more than half an acre, and the weight of the cotton, silk, and rubber is two tons. When the ship sets out upon its voyage it will embrace more than twenty thousand pounds—ten tons—of material and cargo." There are a crew of four men, twelve dogs with sledges, instruments of all sorts, sleeping and cooking gear, boat, oars, skees, guns, ammunition, etc., which weigh more than a ton. There are also in the cargo more than a ton of provisions and three tons of gasoline.

How they will sail when they can, keeping in touch with the earth by a trailing guide rope, stuffed with a reserve supply of food, and anchor when they must by means of a retarder which will be lowered from the forepart of the car, Wellman graphically depicts. He tells of the arctic advantages to airship navigation, of peculiar arctic difficulties and of the almost incredible inventions by which they hope to overcome them, of their chances for fair winds—worked out from scientific observations—of the busy life during their voyage when each man of the crew must be on duty eighteen hours each day and of the four strings to their bow, or four plans of action: the first being to sail to the pole and back to headquarters or no other land, and three alternatives which will probably yield them partial successes at any rate. One cannot imagine a more fascinating subject for speculation than this Wellman article of adventure in the making.

German Dumpling Soup—One-half hour before the soup is to be served drop into it one large potato. When the potato is done put it into a bowl with a lump of butter the size of a walnut. Mash very fine, add a slice of grated toast, an egg, a dash of salt and nutmeg. With a fork work this into a paste, drop small pieces into the soup, boil up and serve.

Fig Tartlets—Two cups of flour, one teaspoon of baking powder and half a teaspoon of salt. With the tips of the fingers work in one-fourth of a cup of shortening, then, with a knife, mix to a dough using half a cup of milk. Knead slightly, roll into a sheet one-fourth of an inch thick and cut into squares of about four inches. Chop fine ten figs, cream one tablespoon of butter, one of sugar and the yolk of an egg; add a dash of salt and a tablespoon of lemon juice, stir this into figs and cook until mixture thickens. Put a tablespoonful of the mixture into the center of each square and fold the points of dough over it; brush over the slightly beaten white of an egg, dredge with granulated sugar and bake about fifteen minutes. Prunes, dates or other fruits may be used in place of figs.

FILIPINO SELF-GOVERNMENT.

Early independence for the Filipinos in order that they may develop the capacity for self-government which he holds they cannot do under American rule, is the policy which William J. Bryan would adopt for the Philippines. He is in favor of applying to the Philippines the policy the United States followed in putting Cuba on its feet as an independent state.

In the July number of the Reader Magazine Mr. Bryan expresses his views on "Imperialism," another interesting installment of the great debate he has been carrying on with Senator Beveridge in that periodical. Senator Beveridge finds that the present policy with regard to the Philippines has been full of benefits to them and to the United States. The day of their self-government is so far distant, in his opinion, that he dismisses it without discussion.

Mr. Bryan points out that although the United States for eight years has been administering a colonial system, yet no party has ventured a platform declaring in favor of a colonial policy. The pledges of congress at the outbreak of the war that the United States did not wish to extend its territory have, he declared, been only half kept, for they applied in spirit to the Philippines as well as to Cuba.

Two intermediate courses, he says, are open to the United States. One is to tax Americans for the development of the islands, conscientiously governing the Filipinos with an eye single to their welfare. This policy, Mr. Bryan believes, is the plan of those who believe it the duty of the United States to care for the "brown baby left on our doorstep." But he believes the Filipinos would distrust this policy and that the American people would grow tired of taxing themselves to help those who did not appreciate the aid.

The second intermediate plan is a government like England has in Canada, Australia and New Zealand, where the people have the equivalent of self-government, subject only to the veto power of a governor general, which is never exercised. This policy would be indefensible under American principles of government. Mr. Bryan says with regard to present administration in the Philippines:

"The Filipinos have reason to complain of the expensiveness of our government in the Philippines. The salaries there are higher than the salaries paid for the same work in this country."

Senator Beveridge sees no prospect of our giving up the islands, and he says:

"'What we have we hold' is the motto of our blood. Expansion is our racial nature. No American public man has ever survived resistance to American territorial expansion; no American political party has ever successfully opposed it."

Mr. Beveridge predicts that if the United States should grant independence to the Philippines their governments would issue bonds and these bonds would be sought by Japan. Then if the Philippine government defaulted in payment Japan would naturally demand payment of the bonds or possession of the islands. This would leave three courses open to the United States—to pay the indebtedness, go to war with Japan or abandon the American protectorate over the Philippines.

The democrats of Pennsylvania would concede no room in their platform for any but state issues. Just at this juncture such a course is eminently wise. The state government needs a cleansing that can be had only at the hands of the democrats and independents. The exposure of the gigantic state house scandals should be enough to stir up a sufficient number of republicans to independent political action as would insure a change in the complexion of the Harrisburg administration. It is much to hope for and more to expect, in view of the political slavery to the republican party in Pennsylvania, but if the time ever is coming when the people of that state will throw off the yoke of the political machine, it must be that time is scheduled to arrive this fall. Perhaps a six-million-dollar steal is regarded in Pennsylvania as a mere bagatelle, but it is difficult to believe the state house scandals will be looked at in that way.

Big telegraph companies are facing something a bit more serious than a strike of their operators. The federal government, pursuant to directions by the president, is preparing to take off the lid and have a look at the business relations of the Western Union and Postal companies. It will not make this trial easier for the corporations to hear when they reflect that the principal factor in getting the probe started in has been the Commercial Telegraphers' union, with whom the companies have had and still have differences.

Mr. Harriman has discovered that even a man who is big enough to run half the railroads of the country, ruin others, defy the government, dispute with the president and cut up high jinks generally in big business and frenzied finance, cannot with impunity monkey with a college boat race. And it was an understrap officer of the navy that took the magnate in tow. If this were not enough to keep his blood boiling for awhile, the fact that the officer who arrested him was the naval aid to the president should furnish ample heat.

Indianapolis judge has trimmed down claims of laywers and others identified with recent litigation over an imbecile's estate, said litigation being purposed to "conserve" said estate. Some $44,000 in claims had been stacked up in a few weeks. If conservation had gone on a little longer raw material would probably have been exhausted.

The peace of Europe is evidently concentrated at The Hague. France, Portugal and Russia have rebellions in progress and Great Britain, Germany and Holland have colonial distempers to cope with. Dove of peace seems to be closely caged and subjected to too much petting at the conference. Ought to give the pampered bird a season of real exercise.

There is always some comfort to be found somewhere. Following fast upon the heels of Judge Landis' order for the appearance in his court of John Dee, H. H., Brother Bill and Partner Archbold comes the mistrial in the Standard oil case at Findlay.

Twenty-Five Years Ago

What The Sentinel Had to Say About Persons and Events Twenty-Five Years Ago.

Joe Lohman, of M. Frank & Co., writes from his home in Bavaria, Germany, that he is enjoying himself hugely.

There are in the city and stopping at a prominent hotel, several gamblers from abroad, sharp and cool as cucumbers.

Beginning July 1 a through line of sleepers will be run from Cincinnati to Mackinaw over the Richmond and Grand Rapids roads.

It is reported that on several occasions people have been stopped on the bridge near the woolen mill and robbed of small sums. Women have been stopped and jewels removed from their ears.

The Indianapolis Times says it is predicted that Andrews, the new station on the Wabash, St. Louis and Pacific railroad, to which place the Wabash shops were recently removed from Fort Wayne, will by the first of next year have a population of 5,000.

July 15th the venerable building on the corner of Main and Calhoun, owned by F. Eckart and Charles McCulloch, and occupied by H. Mitchell, dry goods, and others, will be razed and replaced by a handsome three-story brick structure to be occupied by A. Mergentheim & Co.

The regatta yesterday given by the St. Joe Rowing club on the river above Centlivre's brewery was largely attended despite the unpleasant weather. The single pleasure boat race was won by P. Henkenius, who carried off the silver cup. George Kiefer won the swimming match. Henkenius and Lavanway took the silver cups in the double pleasure boat race. The double crew, C. Prince and Fred Miller, won the match between double and four, receiving a $10 gold piece. The tub race, one of the amusing events of the day, was won by Joe Centlivre over eleven competitors. The junior single scull was won by Charles Centlivre, purse of $50. The senior scull was taken by Charles Prince, distance one and one-half miles; time, 9 minutes. Joe Centlivre won the free-for-all race.

ALCOHOLISM IN THE TROPICS.

Its Effect Is More Terrible There Than in Cooler Climates.

A remarkable article on the dangers of alcoholism in tropical climates has recently appeared in a French medical review. It is written by Dr. F. H. Renant, a noted French physician, who has made a special study of the subject. He says:

"The old-time medical advice, 'Do not drink alcohol in warm climates,' is not to be lightly regarded in these modern days. The paralyzing and degenerating effect of alcohol, in whatever form or however pure, on all the bodily organs and especially the nervous centers, is greatly accentuated in tropical regions. Mainly to the use of alcohol is due the frequency and gravity of diseases of the intestines in these climates. The depression caused by a heated, heavy and moist climate makes the nervous centers peculiarly sensitive to the bodily disorders, arising from its use. Drinkers are peculiarly liable to sunstroke.

"Even moderate consumption of wine or spirits leads to a state of torpor; the brain functions become paralyzed; congestion arises in the weakened blood vessels, inducing toward apoplexy; while the constant and repeated use of alcohol during excessive heat tends to speedily result in delirium and insanity—that 'tropical madness' as the Germans call it, which has given rise to many of the terrible acts recorded in the history of colonization within the tropics. In those regions it is but a short step from habit to excess, then to its terrible result, alcoholic insanity.

"An absolute horror of alcohol ought to be instilled into all those going to the tropics; a settled conviction of the uselessness of weaker, and the injuriousness of the stronger, of its forms. How many lives have been lost there through apoplexy, through injury to the arteries caused by alcohol? How many men die there between the ages of 40 and 50 who, if they had been abstainers and of regular life, might easily have lived to 60 or 70! None should be allowed to leave for these climates without being first systematicaly instructed in these things, and this is specially true of those who will belong to the governing classes there. If they could be universally persuaded of these facts, their precepts and example would have great influence on the humbler white man and on the native."

Drinking More Tea.

Official reports to the state department show that the English people are changing their drinks, and that beer and whisky are steadily giving way to tea. During the last six years there has been a decline of nearly 2,500,000 barrels in the quantity of beer annually consumed in the United Kingdom. For the fiscal year 1906 the figures were 33,504,000 barrels, or 27.9 gallons per capita. There has also been a decrease from 1.1 proof gallons to nine-tenths of a gallon in the per capita consumption of spirits. Imports of tea for home consumption in the first seven months of 1906 were 155,767,710 pounds, an increase of over 10,000,0000 pounds above the same period of 1905.

Alcohol and Longevity.

In the course of an address on "Alcohol and Health," delivered recently at Long Eaton, England, Mr. C. L. Rothera, B. A., coroner for the city of Nottingham, dwelt on the great evils arising from the use of alcohol, and adduced medical testimony to show that many fatal accidents were due to drink. He went on to show that alcohol could not be looked upon as food, and said returns clearly showed that people who did not use alcohol lived longer than those who did use it. Illness was not so great amongst teetotalers, and it was generally admitted that the vitality of temperance people was greater than people addicted to intoxicating drink.

Menace to Naval Interests.

Vallejo, Cal., has 15,000 population and 100 saloons, which would seem not a disproportionate number, but following representations made to him, the secretary of the navy has notified the mayor that if the number of saloons in Vallejo is not cut down about 50 per cent., the Mare Island navy yard will be closed indefinitely, as was done at Bremerton, Wash., some time ago under like conditions. This would mean almost ruin for Vallejo, and the mayor and city trustees have taken up the matter, with practically little choice left but to comply with the secretary's wishes.

A Falling Off in Wine.

The British board of trade returns recently issued, show a great decrease in the imports of wines for the United Kingdom. Considering the increased wealth, the fact that there is a decrease in the consumption of one of those things which increasing wealth would presumably demand is significant. It is evident that a revolution of opinion is taking place in this respect, and that "a man may be accounted a gentleman in this age without drinking a bottle of port to dinner."

E. H. HARRIMAN WOULD NOT OBEY AND GOT ARRESTED

Magnate of the Pacifics Breeds Trouble at the Boat Races.

New London, Conn., June 28.—Edward H. Harriman, the railroad magnate, was arrested here yesterday, and at the orders of Lieutenant Billard, the naval aid of President Roosevelt, at that.

The probable outcome will be a fine of $500 or so for Mr. Harriman, and the loss of the license of a power-boat which he was operating on the Thames yesterday afternoon to follow the Harvard and Yale crews in their annual regetta.

It all came about through Mr. Harriman's anxiety to see the race between the Harvard and Yale shells. He had anchored his yacht Sultana below the drawbridge and had boarded a powerful motor boat in order to follow the race. With him were two women and another man, besides the engineer. Mr. Harriman held the wheel.

Harriman Ignores Warnings.

Lieutenant Billard, who was in charge of the United States revenue cutters, had warned every boat owner not to follow the race. The big varsity struggle had scarcely been started when Mr. Harriman started to follow. Lieutenant Billard and Chairman Schweppe, who were aboard the regetta committee boat, the Arrow, repeatedly warned Mr. Harriman to stop his engine and get out of the course.

Mr. Harriman not only paid no attention to them, but took a position right alongside of the referee's boat and held it. Off the navy yard Lieutenant Billard signaled for a launch and tooted the revenue cutter whistle which finally caused Mr. Harriman to look around.

"You are under arrest, sir," shouted Lieutenant Billard. "You will give yourself up to this man, who will take you aboard the Gresham to await my orders."

Taken Aboard the Gresham.

Then it was discovered that the man in the powerful and speedy boat was Mr. Harriman. Chairman Schweppe of the regetta committee was angry, and he shouted to Mr. Harriman in terms which the latter could not mistake.

A launch from the revenue cutter Gresham, after repeated hailings, managed to persuade Harriman to slow down. He was then told that he and his party were under arrest. Willingly he submitted to be taken in tow and led over to the Gresham. The party was taken on board and the power boat tied up alongside. Shortly thereafter the Arrow came up. Mr. Harriman was in an ungracious mood. He refused to let any one question any member of his party.

When told that he had to consider himself under arrest Mr. Harriman's gloom deepened. He wanted to see the rest of the race, which was fading away rapidly up the river.

Magnate Shakes His Fist.

Mr. Harriman seemed to have the idea that all his troubles were chargeable to Mr. Schweppe, inasmuch as the latter is the chairman of the Harvard-Yale regetta committee. Leaning over the rail of the Gresham Mr. Harriman shook his fist at Mr. Schweppe when the latter explained that he was sorry that the arrest had to be made.

"You'll hear from me later," declared Mr. Harriman, in angry tones.

Prominent politicians in the lobby of the Pequot house, which is not far from the New York Yacht club station, said last night that they did not believe that any particular issue would be raised in the matter as between the president and Mr. Harriman, and it was added that nothing of that kind could disturb the friendship existing between the two.

MUST NOT USE STREETS AS STORAGE TRACK FOR CARS

Board of Works Acts Promptly on Complaint by Business Men.

Acting upon the complaint of business men who protested against the use of streets as storage tracks for electric cars, the board of public works has notified the Fort Wayne and Wabash Valley Traction company that the practice must cease.

Clinton street business men declare that the company has been allowing cars to stand at long intervals during the day and the greater portion of the night upon the west track of the loop on Clinton street, between Main and Columbia streets; that the cars obstruct the street so that vehicles cannot be driven up to their places of business, that the sprinkling wagons cannot give service there and that the cars are cleaned and the refuse swept into the street at this point. Broadway residents also filed a complaint that the company has not yet substituted iron for the wooden poles from Scott avenue southward, and this matter will also be taken up with the street railway company.

There is also complaint that in many parts of the city the limbs on shade trees are permitted to grow so low as to obstruct the passage of pedestrians along the sidewalks. The law requires that the trees be kept trimmed to a height of nine feet above the walk.

Let Sidewalk Contracts.

The Moellering Construction company was awarded a contract for the construction of cement walks on the north side of Sixth street, from Wells street to lot 199, in North Side addition, at 49 9-10 cents a lineal foot. Other bids were received as follows: O. F. Menefee, 59 cents; Fort Wayne Cement Stone Co., 54 cents; Edward Grosjean, 50 cents; Derheimer & Co., 57 cents.

Derheimer & Co. were awarded the contract for grading the street and constructing cement sidewalks on both sides of Wildwood avenue, from Fairfield avenue to Hoagland avenue, at $1.52 1-3 a lineal foot. Other bids received were: Moellering Construction Co., $1.54; Fort Wayne Cement Stone Co., $1.53 3-4; O. F. Menefee, $1.87.

More Walks Ordered.

Plans were ordered for cement walks on the north side of Buchanan street, from Lafayette to Hanna streets. A petition for cement walks on the north side of High street from near St. Mary's avenue to Runnion avenue was referred to the city engineer.

The board ordered plans for the vacation of one road and the establishment of another to straighten up a connecting road from Central avenue to Parnell avenue.

Fifty residents of Winter street presented a petition asking that the plans for the paving of Winter street be changed so that the street may be narrowed from twenty-eight to twenty-six feet. The board is very much opposed to the change because of the heavy traffic on the street, but referred the matter to the city engineer. Most of the residents favor asphalt.

Applications for coal weighers' licenses were received from W. H. Dunn, Fort Wayne Coal company, Peter Quicksell, M. Frank, Maumee Valley Coal company, Home Supply company, Economy Coal company and Consumers' Ice company. All were referred to the board of safety.

A number of petitions to relay sidewalks under private contract were granted.

BLOCK COAL MINERS CALLED.

Will Meet to Consider New Laws In Indiana Affecting Them.

Linton, Ind., June 28.—Hugh Kirkland, president of the United Mine Workers, District No. 8, has issued a call for a meeting of block coal miners, to be held in Brazil Saturday, July 6, to take action on the new legislative enactment which prohibits miners from using a drill in excess of 2½ inches in diameter in drilling a hole in the coal for blasting purposes.

The miners assert that the limitation of the drill has reduced their earning power because it reduces the amount of powder used in a "shot" while the operators are also opposed, on the plea that it has reduced the output from 10 to 15 per cent.

The miners of District No. 11 will hold a similar meeting July 9 and they hope to bring sufficient influence on the governor to insure a special session of the legislature to correct the law complained of.

Under the old law the miners used a drill from 3 to 3½ inches in diameter. The miners also assert that limiting the use of powder to six pounds is sufficient to do away with the danger of "blow outs." The locals in this district will select delegates to this convention on Monday next.

TELLS OF $70,000 BRIBE PLOT.

New Defendant, Accused of Conspiracy, Lays Bare Details.

Pittsburg, June 28.—A. A. Cameron, of Marietta, Ohio, was brought to Pittsburg yesterday on a charge of conspiracy with his brother, Charles S. Cameron, president of the Pittsburg and Tube City railroad, to bribe councilmen to secure a valuable franchise. He gave $1,000 bail. Cameron was then called as a witness in the case of James H. Miholland and Joseph Flaherty, who are under similar charges. Cameron was questioned as to the loss and recovery of $70,000 borrowed to show Councilman W. A. Martin, now under three years' sentence for soliciting a bribe. The money was lost while being taken to a safety deposit vault, but $65,000 was recovered next day. Cameron testified that at the Antlers hotel a messenger boy left a package containing the money for him next day.

KILLED BY A TRAIN.

Indianapolis, Ind., June 28.—Joseph L. Thomas, an iron worker 38 years old, well known in local labor circles, was found dead in the P. & E. railroad yards, a short distance west of Belmont avenue, Hughville, this morning. The man was badly injured and run over by a train some time during the night. The body was found lying at the side of the track. One foot was mashed and there were several cuts and bruises about the head.

TROLLEY MEN AT HICKSVILLE.

[Hicksville News.]

The Morgan promoters of the Fort Wayne, Maysville & Bryan railroad were in our city Thursday night and held a meeting with some of our citizens regarding the contemplated road from Bryan to Fort Wayne. Mr. Morgan from New York, C. M. Pierce from Cleveland, Hood and Zimmerman from Harlan, and Attorney Hoffman from Fort Wayne, were the visiting committee representing the company. They seem anxious to build the road on certain conditions, and with that end in view submitted to our people a proposition. In the first place they demand ten thousand dollars from Hicksville township on the following conditions: One-third when the contract is signed, one-third when the road is half completed, and the balance when the road is finished and equipped with rolling stock. This is much better than the first proposition, when they demanded the $10,000 in advance for preliminary work. They ask for a counter proposition from our people, but whether our committee will be able to make one must be determined later. With both companies at work it seems as Hicksville ought to be able to secure a road in the next eighteen months.

PRESIDENT OF OHIO C. E.

CONVEYS THANKS OF CHINA.

Minister Cheng Tells Emperor's Pleasure at Remission of Indemnity.

Oyster Bay, N. Y., June 28.—The personal thanks of the emperor of China for the remission by the United States of the greater portion of the indemnity were conveyed to President Roosevelt yesterday by Sir Chentung Liang Cheng, the Chinese minister.

The cablegram from the Chinese foreign office to the legation at Washington commanding the thanks to be expressed to the president was made public as follows:

"Waiwu Tu, to the Chinese Minister:

"Peking, June 24, 1907.—Your telegraphic report on the remission of the indemnity having been laid before the emperor, you are commanded to convey to the president of the United States his majesty's warm thanks for this noble exhibition of his friendship towards China, which is deeply and greatly appreciated by having alone taken the lead in a matter of international justice."

The Chinese minister upon leaving Sagamore Hill, where he was a luncheon guest of the president, expressed his hearty appreciation of the opportunity afforded him to carry out his emperor's command before leaving the United States for China next Wednesday.

BEBEL ROILS ... EXPLORER.

Reads From Dr. Peters' Book That Author Gave Negro Emetic to Recover Fowl.

Munich, Bavaria, June 28.—The suit for calumny brought by Dr. Peters, the African explorer, against the Munchener Post reached a climax of interest yesterday through the confronting of Dr. Peters with Herr Bebel, the socialist leader in the reichstag, who for eleven years had regaled the reichstag intermittently with references to the explorer's so-called atrocities.

Yesterday Peters claimed that Herr Bebel, being also an energetic gentleman, would have acted in precisely the same way as he had done in Africa.

Herr Bebel created a sensation in the court room by reading a passage from Dr. Peters' book describing his punishment of a negro servant who stole a guinea hen. He first gave him an emetic, "to get back the stolen hen as far as possible;" secondly, gave the servant twenty-five strokes with a whip; and, third, caused him to be put in chains all day. Herr Bebel added that this was "a monstrous, barbarous, most base action."

Thereupon Dr. Peters sprang up excitedly, but Herr Bebel proceeded with his testimony.

WO...AN'S EXCHANGE SOLD.

Young Woman's Christian Association Has Purchased It.

The Young Woman's Christian association today purchased the Woman's Exchange which has been for several years conducted on West Wayne street, and will take possession Monday morning. The sale is made from the fact that Mrs. C. M. Dawson, who has been most active in its management, is leaving the city. The exchange will be continued by the Y. W. C. A., and for the present will occupy the gymnasium building at that institution. The Woman's Exchange has always been a popular center for the sale of fine baked goods, and the Y. W. C. A. is hopeful of retaining not only all the old consignors but the customers of the Woman's Exchange as well. It will be moved Monday into its new home.

Rev. Father Mungovan Finely Remembered by Old Congregation.

Rev. Father Edward Mungovan, who has been assistant pastor of St. Patrick's Catholic church in this city, and who was but a short time ago transferred to the pastorate at Arcola, was substantially remembered by members of St. Patrick's congregation Wednesday evening. They presented to the popular young priest a purse of $300 as a token of their esteem and good wishes, and in acknowledgement of his faithful work as assistant pastor at St. Patrick's.

CALL MONEY GOES UP.

SOCIETY

Miss Hazel Keplinger gave an informal little sewing party this afternoon in honor of Miss Grace Wilding, a bride-elect of July. A shower of linen was presented Miss Wilding during the afternoon. August—Chaska.

No detail was lacking in beautiful arrangements for the wedding of Miss Hannah May Chaska, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Chaska, and Mr. Abraham J. August which took place Thursday evening, June 27, at the home of the bride's parents, on West Wayne street. The hour for the ceremony was 6 o'clock and Dr. Aaron, of Buffalo, officiated with the assistance of Rabbi Harry Ettelson, of this city. Reineke's orchestra played the wedding march as the bride with her father preceded by her sister, Miss Selma Chaska, came down stairs and entered the livingroom where the groom and his brother, David August, awaited them. The bride looked exceedingly lovely in her bridal array. Her gown was a rich creation of white chiffon satin, cut with train and having an empire girdle in the back. The bodice was made with insertion and medallions of real princess lace which also trimmed the short sleeves. The bridal veil was of tulle but did not fall over the face. It was held in place by real lilies of the valley. The bride's bouquet was of lilies of the valley and white rosebuds in a lace holder from which hung long streamers of white ribbon. Miss Selma Chaska wore a handsome gown of white point d'esprit hung over chiffon and under that white taffeta. The gown was trimmed with bands of white satin and qualities of fillet lace. A shower bouquet of pink sweetpeas was carried by the maid of honor. The decorations of the house were elaborate but in perfect taste. Miss Flick had entire charge and there was an abundance of white and pink peonies and roses used with smilax, plumosus and palms for the green decoration. The room in which the ceremony was performed and the dining-room in which the bridal party were seated at dinner, were decorated in white and green. During the ceremony and while receiving congratulations the bridal couple stood in front of a banking of palms and ferns with a wall pocket of bride roses lending the necessary brightness to the effect. The mantels were banked with white peonies and the chandelier was draped with plumosus and bride roses. The bride's table had a plaque of white roses in the center and at the other large dinner table the coloring was all pink. An elaborate dinner was served to fifty guests. Mrs. Davenport, of Elkhart catered. Fifty covers were laid. The guests were confined to relatives and a limited number of the most intimate friends. The bride and groom left the same evening for an eastern trip of some weeks during which they will visit the large cities and seashore resorts. For traveling the bride wore a light gray novelty suit with hat, gloves and shoes of light brown, a particular fetching and stylish combination of colors this season. After the first of September Mr. and Mrs. August will be at home in Topeka, Kan., where Mr. August is a prosperous merchant. There were many guests from out of town including the following: David Wolff and son, of Bryan, O.; Mrs. Bertha August, of Topeka, Kan., mother of the groom-elect; Mrs. Hattie Mendelson and son, Dan Mendelson, of New York; Mr. and Mrs. Albert J. August and daughter, Eileen, of St. Joseph, Mo.; Miss Eugenia Epstein, of Toledo; Mrs. E. August and daughter, Irene, of Chicago; Mr. and Mrs. Philip Jacobs and children, and Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Baer, all of New York; Dr. and Mrs. Aaron, of Buffalo.

DAINTY AND USEFUL BOX FOR DRESSING TABLE

A pretty and useful ornament for the dressing table may be made of a long, narrow box, such as the ones used for corsets and boots. Padded and covered it will be just the thing for hatpins and gloves and will make a pretty prize for a card game.

And odd length or lengths of brocade, silk, satin or cretonne could be utilized, and joined if necessary, as the joins could easily be hidden under a strip of ribbon or ornamental braid. For those who do not care for the bother of sewing, glue can be used to secure the material to the box, the edges being carefully turned in and stuck down, or finished off with narrow ribbon.

The lid can be secured to the box by a wide strip of ribbon, which should be so arranged as to allow the box to open easily.

The quilted portion, through which the pins are placed, can easily be stuck to the inside of the lid when the whole has been covered, care being taken to keep this perfectly even and the same distance all round from the edge of the lid.

A band of ribbon going around the middle, tying with a bow, gives the appearance to the box of being fastened and adds to the dainty effect.

FACTS ABOUT FLOUR.

Made White by Leaving Out the Part Which Helps Digest.

Modern methods of milling separate the parts of the wheat berry that contain the diastatic element, and furnish only the white flour made up almost entirely of starch.

One of the principal elements needed to digest this starch has been left out in the process, and therefore the person who eats much white bread is almost sure to have intestinal troubles, for the starch does not digest properly and must, of necessity, decay, and cause all sorts of trouble.

Grape-Nuts food, on the contrary, is made up of the entire wheat and barley, and the process of digestion as shown in the human body, are followed as exactly as possible, in a mechanical way, by the use of moisture, time and warmth. No chemicals or other ingredients are used, but simple methods scientifically arranged.

In this way the starch of the grain is transformed into grape-sugar, and the Grape-Nuts food, which appears in granular form, shows on the outside of the little granules, glittering specks of this grape-sugar, which is not put on to the food from the outside, but is the result of the change of the starch into grape-sugar which works out to the surface, very much as the sap of the hickory or maple tree will frequently show in the shape of white sugar on the sawed-off ends of logs.

A handful of Grape-Nuts held to the light will show the little glittering particles of grape-sugar. It is naturally and scientifically predigested, therefore the food agrees with the weakest stomach. It must not be used in large quantities at one meal, for it is concentrated, and over-feeding of even the choicest food is not advisable.

Being perfectly cooked at the factory, the food can be served instantly with cream or good milk. There is a definite, distinct and undeniable gain in nervous energy, and vitality when Grape-Nuts food is used. "There's a Reason."

Sachet Bags and Scents of Clover Rare if Home Made

Method of Drying Sweet Clover and How Bags to Hold It Are Made.

By Margaret Mixter.

Making sachet bags with which to scent one's personal belongings is a pretty and not necessarily expensive bit of work that helps to while away time on summer piazzas and accomplishes a most delightful result. To have laces, frills, blouses, and indeed everything one wears give out a sweet and fresh odor is charming, and better done through the agency of sachet than of toilet waters or extracts that are likely to be too strong for this purpose.

Costing nothing at all for many persons, and exquisitely sweet when dried, is white clover. This grows in profusion in fields and along the country roads, and huge bunches of it can be cut in short time. When sun dried it smells like the sweet grass of which Indians make baskets, and its inexpensiveness renders it possible to use as much as one wishes.

To get up a party to go for white clover provides pleasure for a morning or afternoon. At such a function each person should have a pair of scissors. The young leaves are quite as sweet when cured as the blossoms, so whole stalks may be cut at a time. Remember that it grows less in drying and one should allow for this shrinkage.

To dry, it should be laid on a sheet firmly fastened down to a board on the floor to prevent blowing away. A week or more is none too much for the process, and the grass should be turned from time to time that all may be cured. If, later, it smells rank when close to the nostrils do not be alarmed. The odor it will implant to materials will be of the sweetest.

The best way of using it is in pads that are cut to fit bureau drawers. The materials for these may be fashioned from satin or silkoline, always remembering that the fabric must be thin.

If one wishes one may put embroidered designs over the top, and the edges may be run or feather stitched.

Only enough clover should be put in to cover the pad evenly, and it is well to tuft it at intervals to prevent the grass from working to one end or the other. When completed it is laid on the bottom of the drawer, and there may be two or three pads for each drawer, laying the scented strips between articles of clothing.

Trunks may be entirely lined in this way, by tacking the pads at each corner.

Bed linen scented in the same way is delicious and for this the pads should be cut the size of cupboard shelves.

There is a superstition among old housewives that a bunch of dried sweet clover hung in a room will keep away flies, but I have never seen the method tested. The clover, by the way, is not to be confounded with the white kind that grows short, having a round blossom. Sweet clover becomes very tall, and the blossom is long, that is to say, the blossom stalk is long, and is covered with many tiny white flowers. Any country person will point it out.

Dried lavender is another inexpensive but delicious way of scenting clothes, and should be done as is sweet clover.

A cheap potpourri that will sweeten garments, or may be used for a room is made of eight ounces each of dried lavender flowers and rose leaves, four ounces of orris root powdered, one ounce each of ground cloves, cinnamon and allspice, and half a pound of table salt. Mix all thoroughly and let stand a month in a tight glass jar before using.

THE DUTY OF HAPPINESS.

I cannot but think that the world would be better and brighter if our teachers would dwell on the duty of happiness, as well as on the happiness of duty, for we ought to be as cheerful as we can, if only because to be happy ourselves is a most effectual contribution to the happiness of others. Every one must have felt that a friend is like a sunny day, which sheds its brightness on all around; and most of us can, as we choose, make of this world either a palace or a prison. There is no doubt some selfish satisfaction in yielding to melancholy; in brooding over grievances, especially if more or less imaginary; in fancying that we are victims of fate. To be bright and cheerful often requires an effort; there is a certain art in keeping ourselves happy; in this respect, as in others, we require to watch over and manage ourselves almost as if we were somebody else.—Lord Avebury.

TREATMENT FOR TIRED EYES.

In these days of study and sedentary work requiring much use of the eyes they often become so tired that they refuse to do good work. This is particularly true when the work is done in a poor light, or when it is very fine work. Few eyes will bear such treatment for any great length of time without being spoiled. The question is often asked us, What can be done in such cases? There is one remedy for tired eyes that has great value. It consists in massage with the hand wet in cold or cool water, says Woman's Life. Fill a basin with it and, standing over it, wet the hand with as much water as it will hold and apply it to the eyes, at the same time with the thumb and forefinger giving the eyes a gentle manipulation. Continue the process for four or five minutes several times a day. The results are often almost marvelous.

HOW TO PRESERVE EGGS AT HOME.

There are many ways of preserving eggs, water glass being now very largely used for the purpose. The following, however, is a very satisfactory method of doing so: Take the eggs when newly laid and place them with the small end downward, exactly perpendicular, in a board perforated with holes for the purpose; it should be, say two feet by one foot six inches, and have the legs five inches long, says Woman's Life. This will enable them to be piled one upon another to any extent as they are filled. Eggs thus put in fresh from the nests in August and September will keep till winter as good as fresh ones, not only for cooking but eating. If you desire to be certain that your eggs are good and fresh, put them in water; if the butts turn up they are not fresh. This is an infallible rule for testing eggs.

TO CURE A HEARTACHE.

A person may be badly harassed by affairs of home or bereaved by some dear one—or, worse still, their hearts may have turned through the treachery and slander of some enemy. But, whatever the trouble, the sufferer should show how much manhood or womanhood he or she possesses and throw their whole will power into getting right down to business, says Woman's Life. If one only gets his or her mind on his or her business it will be found the very action of that business and keeping the mind right upon it goes a long way toward curing heartache.

Smart Parisian Frock

VOILE COSTUME FOR SUMMER.

This strikingly pretty afternoon gown in voile is made with a rather full gored skirt and simple "jumper" effect bodice that is smartly outlined with bands of taffeta to match the trimmings at the bottom of the skirt. At the waist line a broad girdle of plain or pleated silk gives a neat and attractive finish to the costume.

THE OPEN WINDOW MEANS HEALTH.

If you wish to be healthy and to sleep well, you are advised by the medical world to keep your windows open night and day. Fresh air is always pleasant and invigorating, but for those who live in town—particularly the dwellers in an upper flat—there is the disadvantage of having to struggle with the multitude of smuts which travel into your room on the wings of the wind and make everything you touch absolutely filthy. Here is a simple recipe for keeping out, to a great extent, these dirty little invaders. Nail a piece of gauze about nine inches deep across the upper part of the window frame on the outside. It must be stretched rather tightly, and a coarse butter muslin or canvas will be found to answer the purpose admirably, a pale dull green color for preference. Then your window can always remain open; you get the air, but the smuts do not get in—they are trapped by the muslin, says Home Notes.

You can do the same at the bottom of the window frame if you like to open the lower half as well, and here the muslin might be cut slightly deeper. It keeps out the flies and other intrusive insects, but it does not in any way impede your view. This is a wrinkle worth considering to those who love cleanliness.

PARIS JEWELER'S ARTIFICIAL GEMS.

A jeweler in Paris has discovered a process by which he is able to melt down small rubies and sapphires of little value so as to produce large stones, which, when cut, can hardly be distinguished from the natural gems.

The only difference between the artificial and the natural stones is that the "silk," or grain, is cloudy in the "constructed" gem. Pawnbrokers have been deceived by the new artificial gems, and have advanced sums upon them far in excess of their value. —St. James Gazette.

If you have not heard the Pianola in its latest improved form—with the Themodist and with the Metrostyle—you are not competent to express an opinion on it, any more than you would be able to judge of automobiles from having inspected only one of the earliest models.

There is no reason why you should not become posted on the very latest improvements in Piano-players. It will be a pleasure to play for you the latest model of Pianola Piano and show you the wonderful progress that has been made in this field.

Just a word of caution: If you are about to invest in a Piano-player or player-piano, you want the best—The Pianola and the Pianola Piano hold by far the pre-eminent position. There are many other makes of Piano-players, but the sales of the Pianola amount to more than all of the others combined. The reason lies in its musical and mechanical perfection.

The underlying importance of this subject makes it almost imperative to investigate it—and investigate it now.

SUGGESTIONS ON HOW TO SELECT AND COOK VEGETABLES.

1. See that the vegetables are fresh. All vegetables, roots and tubers begin to lose bulk and flavor as soon as gathered. The root vegetables, such as potatoes, turnips and carrots, suffer less in this respect. Those that shrink most are the salads, corn, peas, asparagus and the like.

2. Do not leave vegetables in a hot kitchen. As soon as they come from store or garden put in a cool, dark place.

3. Pick over, wash thoroughly and cut out all decayed or unripe portions.

4. Lay peeled vegetables in cold water for some time before cooking. Add salt to the water in which cabbage, cauliflower or other vegetables in which insect life is apt to be concealed are soaked. Do not husk corn or shell peas until ready for use.

5. In boiling vegetables add a little salt to the water.

6. Be sure vegetables are thoroughly done. A rare vegetable is not attractive or wholesome.

7. Serve hot vegetables hot, and salads or cold vegetables cold.

EXPRESS COMPANY TAKES AN APPEAL TO THE CIRCUIT COURT

Seeks to Enforce Payment of Ten Cents Delivery Charges.

The Indiana law governing the delivery of express packages within the corporate limits of cities and towns is to be given another test in the higher courts as the result of an appeal today taken by the Pacific Express company to the Allen circuit court from the decision of Justice Tancey. The sum involved is but 10 cents, and costs in the action have already mounted up to about as many dollars and will surely go much higher, but the contest is important as involving the construction of the law in the matter.

Some time ago the Pacific Express company sent to the home of Edna F. Cox in this city an express package which had been forwarded to her from Arkansas, and insisted upon the payment of 10 cents local delivery charges. This the consignee refused to pay upon the advice of the prosecuting attorney. The express company thereupon refused to surrender the package and still has it in its possession. The consignee began replevin proceedings in Justice Tancey's court to get the package, asserting that under the Indiana law the express company has no right to exact an additional charge for delivery. Barrett & Morris make the appeal for the express company.

One Juror Missing.

An unusual incident transpired in the superior court this afternoon, as a result of which the case of Andrew Miller, who is suing the Grand Rapids and Indiana railroad for $300 damages, is proceeding with but eleven jurors in the box. Before the noon adjournment today Judge Heaton announced that as Judge Zollars, one of the attorneys in the case, was compelled to leave for Indianapolis this afternoon there would be an early adjournment until Monday. The court asked, however, that all the jurors be on hand promptly at 1:30 o'clock this afternoon in order that as much progress as possible could be made up to 4 o'clock today. When court convened this afternoon eleven jurors were in the box, but Juror Weisenberger was missing. He had evidently misunderstood Judge Heaton and believed the adjournment of court at noon had been taken until Monday. After consultation the attorneys agreed to proceed with the case before eleven jurors.

Other Court Notes.

Gustave A. Koehlinger and others have filed suit against Emma Price and others, demanding damages in the sum of $8,000. Ninde Bros. are attorneys for the plaintiff.

Rudolph Siemon has filed suit in the superior court against George Rodewald to quiet title. C. W. Kuhne and Barrett & Morris are plaintiff's attorneys.

The Rolf-Martin company has filed articles of incorporation for record in the county recorder's office. The object of the association is the manufacturing, buying and selling of castings and plumbers' supplies.

The will of George Griebel has been admitted to probate. Extensive property, both real and personal, is bequeathed to the widow and children.

NEAR END OF LOVING TRIAL.

Lawyers Arguing for Instructions Before Talking to Jury.

Houston, Va., June 28.—When court convened today for the fifth day of the trial of former Judge Loving, the attorneys had not finished the preparation of instructions to be presented to the court. Judge Barksdale stated that argument in the case would not begin until after two o'clock this afternoon and the jury was discharged until that hour.

The fight for instructions may be somewhat drawn out. Judge Loving looked more composed today than at any time during the progress of the trial.

The legal contest over the instructions began at 12:40 p. m. The attorneys for both sides spent several hours in conference with a view of agreeing, if possible, on the instructions. The conference was without result and the differences were argued before court.

PSYCHIC EPILEPSY IS MUCH WORSE THAN BRAIN STORM

Caused a Physician to Viciously Attack Couple on the Street.

New York, June 28.—Psychic epilepsy, defined as epilepsy without any external manifestations, was the defense successfully offered to the justices of the court of special sessions yesterday by Dr. Elmore E. Elliott when he was placed on trial charged with making a vicious and unprovoked assault upon Patrick Walsh and his wife on June 15.

Dr. Elliott is 42 years old, has a large private practice, and for three years has been associated with Dr. Darlington, commissioner of the health department, and its administration.

Viciously Attacks Couple.

Patrick Walsh is nearly 70 years of age, and his wife not many years his junior. They were out for a walk in Lexington avenue when they saw Dr. Elliott approaching them near Sixty-fourth street. They saw he was acting strangely and stepped aside to let him pass. He rushed straight at them. Mrs. Walsh said his eyes were blazing, he was frothing at the mouth and presented a frightful aspect.

With a growl he hit her between the eyes and staggered her. He then struck her blow upon blow and felled her. He tried to jump on her, but her husband prevented that only to become a victim himself. The aged couple might have been murdered but for the crowd which quickly gathered.

Patrolman Collins appeared and Dr. Elliott attacked Collins with even greater fury, and the policeman had actually to knock the doctor out before he could handle him.

Never Saw His Victims.

Dr. Elliott took the stand right after the Walshes. He corroborated their testimony, and said he had no motive for attacking them, and never had seen them before. He said the trouble all was caused by psychic epilepsy, from which he is a sufferer by inheritance. He remembered nothing about the attack.

Dr. E. W. Banta testified that he was a specialist in epileptic diseases, and had been treating Elliott for two years for psychic epilepsy.

"What is psychic epilepsy?" asked Justice Mayo, emphasizing the word "psychic."

"It is epilepsy without any external manifestations," said Dr. Banta. "The patient loses his mind for a minute or several minutes, and the interval is absolutely blank. When he becomes conscious he has no recollection of what he did or said."

Dr. Elliott then was discharged.

INDICTMENTS ARE FOUND.

Grand Jury Returns Bills Against Men of Policyholders' Committee.

New York, June 28.—Indictments charging conspiracy and forgery against George R. Scrugham, manager of the International Policyholders' committee and Charles S. Stirrup, an employe of the committee, were returned today by the county grand jury.

An indictment for conspiracy was also found against Charles Carrington, another employe of the committee. The charges upon which the indictments were based grew out of the recent election of trustees of the New York Life Insurance company. There is one indictment charging conspiracy against both Scrugham and Stirrup. Against Schrugham also there were three indictments charging forgery in the second and third degrees, and one against Stirrup charging forgery in the second degree. The three men will plead to the indictments next Monday.

STEAMER BURNS AT DOCKS.

The Madonna From Mediterranean Ports Afire in Brooklyn.

New York, June 28.—The steamer Madonna, lying at the Atlantic docks in Brooklyn with a cargo of general merchandise from Mediterranean ports, was damaged by fire today. The blaze began from spontaneous combustion in the forward hold, where ten men were at work removing the cargo. The men narrowly escaped being overcome by smoke. Fireboats poured a great amount of water into her hold and although it continued to burn for a long while it was believed that fire proof bulkheads and the fire boats would limit the fire to one hold and extinguish it without serious damage to the ship.

HIS ACTIONS MYSTERIOUS.

Conduct of Thomas Carpenter Seemed Strange.

Thomas Carpenter, who said his home is on the west side, was arrested last night about 2 o'clock back of the Spuhler meat market on Harrison street, and charged by the officer with loitering. Carpenter had been told several times to go home, but would not. He had in his possession a heavy club when apprehended, and it is thought by the police that he intended to attempt a burglary. He was given $10 and costs.

HOW BIDDERS SHARE LIGHT SYSTEM CONTRACTS

Total Cost of $154,759.21 is Divided Among Five Firms.

The total cost of Fort Wayne's municipal lighting system as shown by contracts which have been prepared by City Attorney Colerick and are now ready for signature by the board of public works and the successful bidders, to be later approved by the city council, is $154,759.21. Engineer Owen Ford has tabulated the distribution of the work among the five successful bidders as follows:

Fort Wayne Electric Works	$70,580.80
McBride Electrical Company (St. Paul)	66,002.00
P. K. Engineering Co. (St. Louis)	19,220.00
Moellering Construction Co. (Fort Wayne)	1,238.41
Alphonso Custodis Chimney Construction Co. (Chicago)	4,400.00
Fort Wayne Electric Works (additional order)	3,318.00

The first contract signed was that with the Fort Wayne Electric works, and it is expected that signatures to the others will be affixed within a few days. When this is done all will be sent to the city counsil for approval.

Olds Company's Protest.

The C. L. Olds Construction company, of this city, has filed a protest against the acceptance of the bid of the McBride company upon the distributing system, alleging that it had been unfairly treated and that as a matter of fact the Olds bid would be found to be the lowest. Today the Olds company sent to the board the following letter:

Fort Wayne, Ind., June 28th, 1907.
Honorable Board of Public Works, City of Fort Wayne, Ind.:

Gentlemen: We wish to make you the following explanation in justification of our stand taken before the board in the matter of our bid upon section nine of your electric light specification:

Our objection to your award of this section was based upon the misstatement made to us by Mr. Ford, your engineer, that the McBride company's bid was based upon No. 8 wire for the arc circuits.

We have examined the McBride bid and find that it is based upon the specifications and explicitly proposes to complete section nine according to the specifications for $42,000.00. Upon this basis it is the lowest bid and we have no ground of complaint at the award of the contract to the McBride company.

We respectfully call your attention to the following paragraph under heading "Wire," page five of section nine of the specifications, viz: "All street lamp circuit wires shall be No. 6 B. S. G.," also to the concluding paragraph under same heading, as follows: "Contractor will state the difference in price between No. 6 and No. 8 wire for the said arc circuits per mile erected complete as specified and the city reserves the right to adopt No. 8 wire instead of No. 6 at the legitimate and proper difference in price."

We further desire to call your attention to the fact that the substitution of No. 8 wire for No. 6 in the arc circuits, as specified, should effect a saving to the city of over $5,000.00 and should cut the McBride bid down to less than $37,000.00, upon which basis we do not object to the award.

There is not one word in the McBride bid justifying the assertion made by Mr. Ford that it is based upon No. 8 wire, and we cannot understand his attitude in the matter.

Respectfully submitted by
C. L. Olds Construction Co.
By C. L. Olds, President.

Mr. Ford's Comparison.

With reference to Mr. Olds' protest, Engineer Ford has tabulated his report on the examination of the two bids by which he shows a net sum of $3,524.28 gained to the city in the acceptance of the McBride bid. Mr. Ford's tabulation submitted to the board of works is as follows:

McBride Company's Bid.—
On Section 9	$42,000 00
On Section 11	15,600 00
Total on two sections	$57,600 00
—Olds Company's Bid.—
On Section 9	$45,136 58
Add. for 290 lamp poles not specified in bid	2,241 70
Add. for extension work on top of telephone poles	270 00
Add. for difference between Cutters wind-braced mast arms and style bid on by Olds	500 00
Total equivalent bid Sec. 9	$48,148 28
Deduct for No. 8 wire instead of No. 6 on arc circuit as detemined by engineer	4,524 00
Net bid of Olds Co., Sec. 9	$43,624 28
Bid of B. Borkenstine on Sec. 11	17,500 00
Total for sections 9 and 11 complete	$61,124 28
McBride bid on same sections	57,600 00
Net in favor of McBride bid	$3,524 28

Mr. Ford explains that the McBride bid was upon the two sections together and could not be separated. Mr. Olds, he says, bid merely on section 9, and his bid could have been accepted only in connection with that of Mr. Borkenstein for the station building as shown in the tabulated statement. There appears to be a variation in the estimate of Mr. Ford and that of Mr. Olds regarding the quantity of wire necessary for the arc circuits. Mr. Ford says that the selection of the magnetite lamp instead of the old arc lamp type renders the smaller size or No. 8 wire fully as acceptable as the heavier grade, but that it was necessary to invite bids upon both sizes because it had not then been determined which type of lamp would be chosen.

In addition to the Fort Wayne work, Engineer Ford is at present consulting engineer upon the construction of an additional water supply at Belleville, Ill., where seven miles of twelve-inch pipe is being laid to convey water to the city from a source of supply farther away than the wells now in use.

HEARING IN PROGRESS.

Sergeant Harkenrider on Trial Before Board of Safety.

Police Sergeant Harkenrider is on trial before the board of public safety this afternoon on charges of conduct unbecoming an officer. The charges were based on language attributed to the officer while on duty in the strike district in the Bass foundry region. A striker stated that the officer accused him of having a police record and a saloonkeeper said Sergeant Harkenrider swore at him. Attorney Charles M. Niezer appears for Sergeant Harkenrider and former City Judge R. B. Dreibelbiss for those making the charges. A large number of witnesses are on hand.

HARRIMAN THE TALK OF THE THAMES RIVER

Boating Men Have No Very Kindly Feeling for Him —He Was Arrested.

New London, Conn., June 28.—The arrest of E. H. Harriman, for interferring with the varsity race last evening was the talk of the river today. Mr. Harriman was not spoken of kindly by the boating men, who year after year have labored hard to make it possible for crews to row a twenty minute race without having the lives of the oarsmen endangered and the sport of the race spoiled by fast boats.

When Lieutenant Billard returned to the Gresham last evening he turned Mr. Harriman over to Captain J. L. Sill of the revenue cutter Dexter, who was the senior officer in charge of the course. Captain Sill ordered Mr. Harriman's power boat tied up at the navy yard and then allowed Mr. Harriman to go down the harbor and board his yacht, the Sultana, which was lying off the Pequot house. Mr. Harriman immediately left. He had with him last evening when he was arrested his son, who is a student at the Groton school, and a school friend, and two ladies whose names were not learned.

RUSSIA STRENGTHENS FORCES.

Hopes to Keep Armenian Troubles From Her Territory.

Tiflis, Russia, June 28.—On account of the anarchical conditions of Bitlis, Turkish Armenia, where much of the fighting between Musselmans and Armenians has occurred, the Russian troops on the Turkish frontier have been heavily strengthened in order to prevent the transmigration of Armenian refugees and a spread of the aziation to Russian territory, and also for the moral effect of the movement on the Turkish government. A repetition of the Armenian massacres of 1896 when thousands of Armenian refugees crossed the frontier and settled in southern Caucasus, is feared. The Russian government first encouraged the movement as a valuable industrial and civilizing factor, but later it felt obliged to prohibit immigration, claiming that the rapid occupation of Tartar lands by colonists was responsible for the Armenian-Tartar racial warfare, which has since periodically drenched southern Caucasus with blood.

NEAR ETERNITY.

The most high church Episcopalians in the world are those who worship 4,000 feet above the sea on the slope of a volcano on the island of Maui, Sandwich Islands. They are also nearest the mouth of the pit, for one of the largest craters on earth is but a short distance above the church. Regular services are held and are attended by many persons, and there is a church debt, which is more excusable than most church debts, in view of the difficulties to be overcome in building in such a location.

HARVARD FRESHMEN SAVE BIT OF GLORY.

Four-oared, Yale, 12:33; Harvard, 13:15.

The Freshman Race.

The freshman race was a splendid struggle, a fight from the pistol to the navy yard, in which Harvard always had a lead with enough reserve power to keep just in the lead. No freshman crews ever fought it out better, although the time was slower than for several years in this event. The start was at the draw-bridge and both crews broke water the instant the pistol flashed, a pretty sample of perfected racing start.

Harvard sent her oars in with a hard jerk which brought just a little lead. The stroke seemed a little higher than was expected, going fully to 34 for Harvard and 32 for Yale. The pace of Harvard told and nearly a length to the good was hers before the first flag on the course was passed. Yale tried to even matters, but the crimson could not be caught. In the half mile, right at the navy yard bend, the Harvard boat seemed to fairly skim along. Yale still had lots of strength and spirit and fought it out good and hard, but the crimson's lead was too much to overcome and the Harvard freshmen won the third race in eight years and avenged the hard fought defeat of last year.

Harvard Four Soon Rowed Out.

As the freshmen rowed their shells in shore to transfer to the launches the four-oared crews went out to their positions for the other race. After a few minutes' delay this crew was sent away. The story is quickly told, as Harvard rowed itself out within a mile and after that Yale was content to keep up a steady stroke which slowly added more lengths to the lead she had taken at the very outset. Yale at the finish appeared to have fully fifteen lengths to the good, with her men as fresh and smiling as when they took position. The Harvard men appeared to be well rowed out.

He then heard that the soldiers were coming and went to Cripple Creek, where along with many others he went to Victor.

Pleasantries of the Soldiers.

At Victor, Easterly said, the soldiers in passing federation men, would say:

"There's one that ought to be hanged or have his head shot off."

In the afternoon C. C. Hamlin, secretary of the Mine Owners' association, made a speech in the streets in which he referred to the Independence depot explosion and said that fifty or more of the leaders ought to be hanged and the rest driven out of the district.

Then a shot was fired and as Easterly put it "the fireworks began."

"Were you armed?" asked Darrow.

Easterly said he had a "six shooter."

"What did you do?"

"I did like many of the others. I was very badly excited—"

"Where did you go?"

"When the firing was over I went up Third avenue and stayed there until I saw the militia maneuvering around and apparently surrounding the union hall. Then they began shooting."

The interview between Judge Landis and Attorney Miller was terminated by the attorney, who withdrew, saying that he would return shortly after 12 o'clock with other attorneys for the company.

At the appointed time Attorneys Miller and Rosenthal appeared in the court room and Judge Landis asked:

"Have you anything more to say, Mr. Miller?"

"I made my suggestions this morning," replied Mr. Miller, "and in view of the peremptory reply of the court, I do not believe that I have anything more to say."

"Very well," rejoined the court, and the affairs of the Standard Oil company went over until July 6.

IMPURE MILK IS SOURCE OF MUCH DEADLY DISEASE

Government's Fight for Pure Supply Attracts Much Attention.

Washington, June 28.—The government's campaign in favor of pure milk supply for all the cities of the country is attracting much attention. From the agricultural department, which is backing this campaign, there has been issued for general circulation a report on the sanitary relations of the milk supply which the department believes will be helpful to any municipality that is now wrestling with the problem of obtaining a purer supply of milk. The report of this special committee is based largely on its researches here in the District of Columbia. The committee was composed of Dr. George M. Kober, professor of hygiene, medical department, Georgetown university; Emile Berliner, a celebrated chemist; Dr. G. Lloyd Magruder, Dr. Charles F. Mason, assistant surgeon-general United States army; Dr. A. D. Melvin, chief of the bureau of animal industry, department of agriculture; Dr. John R. Mohler, chief of the pathological division of that bureau; Edward H. Webster, chief of the dairy division of the same bureau; Dr. M. J. Rosenau, director of the hygienic laboratory in the bureau of public health and marine hospital service, and Robert G. Smith, one of the largest dairy men in the country.

Committee's Report.

The conclusions of this committee are:

"It is a remarkable fact that every attempt to improve the purity of this invaluable article of food should be promptly opposed by the milk industry, which constitutes a strong spoke in the commercial wheel and evidently considers it meddlesome interference with the trade. The men engaged in this industry evidently do not know, and can not know, that such hydra-headed diseases as cholera infantum, scarlet fever and diphtheria have been disseminated in the milk supply, that typhoid fever epidemics have been thus caused, and that milk may be the vehicle of the germs of tuberculosis and other infectious diseases and morbific agents.

"Pure, natural milk can only be secured at dairies with sanitary buildings, a pure water supply, healthy, well-fed and well-cared-for cows, a well equipped and well-kept milk room, provisions for thorough cleanliness, intelligent and conscientious people in charge, and clean methods throughout. There are a number of persons, thanks to the training received at the dairy schools, who make an honest effort to place on the market milk obtained under such conditions, but by far the majority of milk producers are indifferent to hygienic requirements and would prefer the good old days when there was no control even to prevent the shameful adulterations of milk by the intentional dilution with water, the removal of some of its cream, or the addition of skimmed milk—practices which, alas, still exist.

Below the Standard.

"Dr. H. W. Wiley, chief of the bureau of chemistry, United States department of agriculture, reports that during the last few months his bureau examined 327 samples of milk bought in Washington, of which fifty-six, or a little over 17 per cent, had been skimmed or watered, and of ninety-six samples of cream, thirty-eight, or 39.95 per cent, were below the standard required by law.

"The records of the health department of the District of Columbia show that during the last five years 28,859 samples of milk were examined, and that of these 6,801, or 23.5 per cent, were below the fixed standard, and in 1,305 instances prosecutions for the sale of adulterated milk were presented in the courts.

"These robberies, largely made up of the pennies of the poor and sickly women and half-starved children, amount in money value to considerably more each year than the entire cost of the health department.

Not to the Individuals.

"Matters of this kind should not be left to the individual dealers, but the principles which ought to be carried out should be embodied in effective laws and accepted and enforced in a practical sense.

"Honorable men will not object to regulations calculated to promote the purity of their product and the health of their customers, and as many of the most serious faults in the milk business are the result of ignorance rather than of intentional neglect, the difficulties will be materially lessened by proper education and trade competition. At all events the dairyman will conclude in the end that it is money in his pocket to comply with requirements which at present may appear to him the outcome of exaggerated fear or extreme sanitary zeal of theorists.

Good Thing for Farmers.

"So, for example, frequent inspections of the dairy stock will be a source of ultimate profit to the owner, as the presence of tuberculosis or any other communicable disease endangers his entire herd, and great losses can be prevented by the prompt isolation or extermination of the first case. The farmer will likewise find that if he houses his cattle in spacious, well lighted and well ventilated stables, or even in properly constructed sheds, there will be less tuberculosis and sickness among the herds. Indeed, every recommendation so far submitted by the committee is not only in the interest of the public health, but also of benefit to the farmer, and if the production of a clean, wholesome milk involves increased cost, the committee is on record to the effect that the additional expense should be borne by the consumer.

"1. It has been shown by the most painstaking investigations, extending over a long period of years, that certain diseases in the animal are communicable through the medium of the milk, this being especially true of tuberculosis, foot-and-mouth disease, anthrax and cowpox; and that diseases like garget, gastroenteritis and septic fevers in the cow will render the milk morbific to man.

"2. It has been shown that animals which have fed on poisonous forage plants or have been treated with strong medicaments are disqualified from producing a pure or sound milk.

"3. During the past twenty-five years there have been published in the different medical journals the histories of 195 epidemics of typhoid fever, 99 of scarlet feved and 36 of diphtheria, all traceable to the milk supply.

Typhoid in Bad Milk.

"In the recent exhaustive investigation conducted by the highest health authority in this country, viz., the United States Bureau of Public Health and Marine Hospital Service, the commissioner definitely traced eighty-five of the 866 cases of typhoid fever (about 10 per cent.) in the District of Columbia to the use of infected milk.

"4. It has been shown in a former report that in the District of Columbia about one-fourth, and in the country at large about one-sixth of all the children born perish before the completion of the first year; that nearly one-half of the deaths in children under one year of age are caused by gastro-enteric diseases, chiefly infantile diarrhoea; and that of the 54,047 infantile deaths which have been investigated at home and abroad with reference to feeding $6.6 per cent. had been artificially fed, all of which points with more than mere suspicion to the fact that the morbific agent is introduced into the body with the food (cow's milk).

"The Washington market milk compares favorably with the supply in other cities. There is no evidence to show that it is worse, but there is abundant evidence to indicate that stale and infected market milk is everywhere responsible for a needless sacrifice of human life, and it is clearly the duty of the state to take what precautions it can to prevent sickness and distress. To indicate the value of sanitary control in this city it may be stated that since the enactment of a pure milk law in 1895 the percentage of deaths in children under one year of age to the total deaths of all ages has been reduced from 26.94 to 18.36 in 1905.

Cooling the Milk.

"The committee on certified milk and the committee on sanitary relations of the milk supply have both emphasized the importance of cooling the milk and keeping it at a temperature below 50 degrees Fahrenheit, except as may be necessary in the process of pasteurization or sterilization, until the milk is delivered to the consumer. The reason for this is that the milk when it leaves the udder contains very few germs; the majority gain access during handling, especially when the milking is done in a dusty stable, or from excrementitious matter adhering to the teats and udder of the animal. These germs multiply with astonishing rapidity whenever the temperature of the milk is above 50 degrees Fahrenheit.

"Certified milk is reasonably safe, but this is no guaranty that it may not occasionally contain germs of disease, and those who desire to guard against this slight risk should pasteurize it in the home.

"There is every argument from a commercial and sanitary standpoint in favor of a central plant, erected within reasonable distance from the union depot, where all the milk for the city should be received and prepared for distribution. Such a step would result in the creation of suitable conditions for the proper handling and storage of milk, sterilization of milk cans and utensils; and the efforts of the local milk dealers to provide facilities for their 150 or more dairies scattered over the city, all more or less liable to infection, could be concentrated in one plant with a decided saving in expense.

As to Grocery Milk.

"Milk should never be sold by grocery stores or milk shops unless it has been delivered to such establishment in original sealed bottles, and then only when there is provision for maintaining the milk at a temperature of 50 degrees Fahrenheit.

"Your committee is so strongly impressed with the manifold dangers connected with the milk supply that until the needful reforms in dairy methods are accomplished it recommends to the public the following as immediate safeguards:

"1. Do not patronize a milk dealer at any price whose milk after standing for over two hours reveals a visible sediment at the bottom of the bottle. It is evidence of dirty habits, extremely suggestive of danger and entirely preventable by clean, decent methods without greatly increasing the cost.

"2. Subject all your milk to home pasteurization, by simply bringing it to the boiling point, and after cooling keep the milk on ice. This will destroy germ life and reduce the chances of milk-borne diseases to a minimum; and if we can reduce our typhoid fever rate even only 10 per cent. by this simple method, not to mention infantile diarrhoeas and other infectious diseases, it is clearly our duty to do so."

CORTICITE.

New Insulating Material and Its Various Applications.

Consular and Trade Reports for June 25, 1906 (No. 2598) contained a brief report from Vice Consul R. H. Kinchant, of Lisbon, Portugal, describing a new insulating material invented by a Portuguese cork merchant, of which samples were furnished the bureau of manufactures. The report attracted wide attention, and, in compliance with numerous applications, the samples were loaned and circulated. The samples finally were lost in transit, and Consul General Louis H. Aymé was requested to furnish others. These have been received and are at the disposal of manufacturers and others interested. Of the new material Vice Consul Kinchant wrote:

This new insulating material has for its principal component granulated cork and is called "corticite." Its application is unlimited, for it will resist the cold of a Siberian winter and the rays of a tropical sun, also the attacks of insects, even the white ant being powerless against it. As a non-conductor of sound it should be useful in city flats. On boiler tubes and boilers it is said to reduce the temperature of the boiler room to an agreeable one. It is not inflammable, and may be generally adopted for partitions and linings of houses. Bricks and slabs of "corticite" are made for this purpose, and can be sawed and bored like wood. It would seem to possess special advantages for use on warships, taking the place of wood as far as possible.

Under date of March 29 Consul General Aymé forwards samples of corticite and writes:

In addition to those uses of corticite noted by Mr. Kinchant in his report of May 15, 1906, a very important use is for flooring, and I enclose a sample of such flooring in each package. These samples show only one color and of single thickness. There are several colors, although red is most even in tint, and a double thickness. The material is applied directly to the floor, to which it very strongly adheres. It requires two or three days to dry and is then claimed to be fire, water and sound proof. I have seen an office floor of corticite in constant use for more than a year, and it does not show the least sign of wear. Great durability, amounting to almost indestructibility, is claimed for it, and it is easily cleaned and kept clean. It is not very expensive, single thickness floors being laid for about $1 the square yard. Corticite floors would seem to be the ideal thing on war vessels, passenger steamers, hospitals, schoolrooms, and, indeed, wherever large numbers of persons congregate and sanitary conditions are important. Corticite floors are insect and germ proof, as well as sound, fire and water proof. They are warmer than oilcloth or linoleum floors and are pleasant to walk upon. They cannot rip, tear or splinter, and the walls if desired may be similarly coated. I am informed that during the past year nearly a million square meters of corticite floors have been laid.

DENOUNCES STRIKES IN AMERICA; PRAISES PRESIDENT

Member of British Commons Says Labor War is Economic Barbarism.

New York, June 27.—Robert William Perks, M. P., who returns to England on the Celtic today, after a business trip of a month in Canada, said in an interview that the frequent labor strikes in the United States were an "economic barbarism."

Mr. Perks is at the head of the Georgian Bay and Montreal Canal company, which has the contract for the construction of the St. Lawrence canal. He is an engineer and has been associated with the largest engineering undertakings in England and South America. He said that at one time his company had employed on the different undertakings 33,000 men and that there was never a strike.

"President Roosevelt," said Mr. Perks, "deserves credit for his great courage in opposing the tyranny of the trusts, but there is also tyranny in the unions and in dealing with the combinations he has adoped a middle course. One thing that surprised me here was the numerous strikes. I think they are economic barbarism. All questions arising between employers and employes can be settled without appeal to arbitration. I have always made it a practice to meet the men employed by us and discuss the problems with them and tell them what we could afford to pay. We never had a strike."

The St. Lawrence canal will cost about $100,000,000 and if the dominion government, said Mr. Perks, would adopt the plans it ought to be finished in four years.

FRIENDLY DRINK OF POISON.

Man Who Accepts Hospitality of Traveler Is Dead.

Rochester, N. Y., June 27.—Peter and David Morad, of Philadelphia, passengers on a train, accepted a drink of whisky from Leo L. King, another passenger from Wilkesbarre, Pa. The three men drank the contents and King produced a second one. Peter Morad took the first drink when King remembered that the bottle contained cyanide of potassium. Morad died in a few hours. King was arrested. He said he had secured the poison to end his life on account of domestic troubles.

POSTMASTER'S SON A THIEF.

Clerk at Apollo, Pa., Uses Stolen Mileage Books.

Pittsburg, Pa., June 27.—H. C. Cochran, a clerk in the postoffice at Apollo, where his father is postmaster, confessed yesterday to stealing a mileage book and several other articles from the mails. About three months ago a mileage book was missed and Cochran was closely watched. Recently he made a trip to Pittsburg, using the book. He gave the inspector a jeweled cigaret case which he had taken from the mails and admitted purloining sums of money. The family is highly respected.

BUYS OLD CANAL BED.

Fort Wayne, Toledo and Detroit Traction Project Is Active.

Projectors of the Fort Wayne, Toledo and Detroit Traction company have purchased of H. F. Schnelker, of New Haven, a section of the old Wabash and Erie canal bed eight miles in length extending eastward from New Haven to the Ohio state line to be used as a right-of-way. Little has been heard of this line, but the company has been moving quietly for several months, and engineers will start upon the final surveys. It is announced that work will start at Detroit, Toledo and Defiance, working westward. Right-of-way from Five Points to Fort Wayne, it is said, has already been secured. Gasoline motor cars are under consideration as a substitute for electricity as motive power.

MILLIONAIRE ACCUSED BY WIFE

Sensational Charges Made Against Charles P. Anthony, of Muncie.

Muncie, Ind., June 28.—Harriett B. Anthony, noted for her beauty and prominent socially, both in this city and the state, yesterday sued her husband, Charles P. Anthony, reputed to be worth a million, and a noted horseman, for divorce and $75,000 alimony. Mrs. Anthony, who was a Miss Mitchell, and her husband were married in 1886, and have one son, on whose evidence the mother expects to have her accusations sustained.

Shortly after marriage, the wife claims, Anthony conceived the idea of speculating in blooded and fast horses, and thereafter became sordid and ill tempered. His first outbreak, she alleges, was in Chicago in 1893, when, she claims, he kicked her viciously.

Mrs. Anthony alleges perfidy, averring that he keeps apartments in one of his downtown buildings that are conveniently fitted for entertaining people. She says that he keeps women's gowns and other apparel in the rooms, and that the place has become notorious.

Anthony is president of the Delaware County Fair association and a member of the State Fair association. He denied his wife's accusations last night. It is understood he will file a sensational cross bill.

MAYOR TIES UP TRACTION LINE

East Moline Official Brings Company to Time in Franchise Dispute.

Moline, Ill., June 28.—The Moline, East Moline and Watertown Interurban line was stopped by Mayor Johnson of East Moline yesterday from operating cars through his city because the company had not acted as promptly as expected on the terms of a franchise ordinance. Peace was patched up just in time to carry workmen from the Rock Island roads shops at Silvis and the factories of East Moline to their homes at night. The concessions made by the company are not made public. East Moline, which became a city only two months ago, has asked the company to pay $10,000 now and $1,000 a year for nineteen years in return for a twenty-year franchise.

ACCUSES JUDGE AND BANKER.

Former Missouri County Treasurer Charges His Downfall to Others.

Aurora, Mo., June 28.—W. I. Long, who resigned as county treasurer this week after settling a shortage, yesterday divulged to Prosecuting Attorney Renfro the names of those he claims were responsible for his downfall. He involves a prominent judge and also a banker. He says he received none of the money. While the prosecuting attorney was having the books examined by an expert he had guards on duty day and night at the county courthouse. Several records have been burned and others mutilated so that the shortage of the former county treasurer cannot be accurately known.

Toledo, Ohio, June 28.—Mrs. J. M. Hunt, who but ten minutes before the accident was Miss Buelah Cox, was seriously and possibly fatally hurt last night when the auto in which the wedding party was driving was struck by an interurban car while both were going at rapid speed. The auto was going from the home of the minister, who had just married Miss Cox and Mr. Hunt, and was on the way to a downtown restaurant, where the wedding dinner was to be served. The couple was to have left for Charlestown, the groom's home, tonight.

Indigestion

Stomach trouble is but a symptom of, and not in itself a true disease. We think of Dyspepsia, Heartburn, and Indigestion as real diseases, yet they are symptoms only of a certain specific Nerve sickness—nothing else.

It was this fact that first correctly led Dr. Shoop in the creation of that now very popular Stomach Remedy—Dr. Shoop's Restorative. Going direct to the stomach nerves, alone brought that success and favor to Dr. Shoop and his Restorative. Without that original and highly vital principle, no such lasting accomplishments were ever to be had.

For stomach distress, bloating, biliousness, bad breath and sallow complexion, try Dr. Shoop's Restorative—Tablets or Liquid—and see for yourself what it can and will do. We sell and cheerfully recommend

BOWSER'S HUMANITY.

Finds a Lost Boy In Street and Has an Idea He Will Adopt Him.

HIS KINDNESS IS MISPLACED.

Parents of the Child Accuse the Philanthropist of Stealing Their Offspring and Come Near Giving Him a Beating.

[Copyright, 1907, by P. C. Eastment.]

"Well, what is it this time?" asked Mrs. Bowser as Mr. Bowser came home the other evening to dinner holding the hand of a very dirty and very ragged boy about six years old.

"Didn't you hear this child crying and wailing on the street?" he queried in reply.

"No, I didn't. There is so much noise all the time that I pay no attention to anything."

"Of course not. Half the population of the city can freeze and starve to death in front of the house, and you wouldn't concern yourself at all. Thank heaven that I was born with a heart."

"And what do you call this?"

"This is either a lost or an abandoned boy. I found him crouched against the fence and hungry and cold, and I have brought him in to succor him. He is so cold and exhausted now that he can't talk, but after dinner we will question him. He may have been sent out by his mother to beg a few pennies to keep his brothers and sisters from starving, or his discouraged and desperate father may have abandoned him to the tender mercies of the world. See that he has a plate at the table."

"AND WHAT DO YOU CALL THIS?"

Mrs. Bowser took a closer look at the boy and smiled. The boy returned her look and seemed to be confused and uneasy.

"Are you trying to scare him to death?" demanded Mr. Bowser.

Boy Is Ravenous.

Mrs. Bowser did not answer, but led the way down to dinner and gave the boy a seat at the table and heaped his plate high with dinner. He was as ravenous as a young wolf, and after watching him for awhile Mr. Bowser said:

"Poor child! I suppose this is the first meal he has sat down to for many weeks. This place must seem like heaven to him."

"What are you going to do with him?" was asked.

"I don't know yet. He should be returned to his parents tomorrow if they can be found. If not, I may adopt him. One has only to glance at his face to see intelligence far beyond his years."

As the kid was cross eyed and snub nosed and flat faced, Mrs. Bowser couldn't see the intelligence part, but she made no comment, and directly Mr. Bowser continued:

"If this child is adopted and reared as he should be, who knows the goal he will ultimately reach?"

"That's true. He has begun well by reaching for about everything on the table."

"Never mind that. Of course he hasn't been brought up to have table manners. I wish you were more humane, Mrs. Bowser."

"I could pick up a dozen lost children a day, but I have no clothes or food for them."

Calls Wife Hard Hearted.

"If you were a millionaire the poor would be no better off for it. You are selfish and hard hearted. You have no sympathy for those in misfortune. Any evening I may come home and find a man, woman or child frozen to death in the vestibule."

"We might put a kerosene stove out there," she suggested.

Mr. Bowser turned red in the face and was about to say something decisive when the lost boy looked around for something more to devour, and, not finding it, he picked up his plate and slammed it down on the floor and began to kick and yell.

"Here, what the devil is this?" shouted Mr. Bowser as he rose up. "Young man, what do you want?"

"Sunthin' 'teat," replied the boy.

"Something to eat! Good lands, but you have eaten more than three hired men could already! You may get something more by and by, but not now. We'll go up to the sitting room. Mrs. Bowser, why didn't you smile at him and speak a few motherly words?"

Mrs. Bowser took the boy by the hand and led him upstairs. On the way they passed the cat, and he gave her a vicious kick. As he reached the sitting room he walked over to the piano and began kicking that and shuffling. Mr. Bowser seized his arm and hauled him away and twisted him around and said:

"We mustn't judge him too harshly. He is hardly old enough yet to know whether we are his friends or enemies. Isn't it a sad case that a child of his age is without a home, perhaps without a father or mother?"

Kicks at Bowser.

"Very sad, indeed, but still he ought to behave himself," answered Mrs. Bowser as the boy kicked at Mr. Bowser and just missed one of his shins.

"He will be all right as soon as he knows we are his friends. He may have a father who came home and beat him, and he has got in the habit of fighting back. Bubby, come here. Now look at me. I am your friend. I am going to give you more to eat and a warm bed to sleep in tonight. I like boys. Perhaps I shall adopt you and send you to school and let you live with me all the time. What is your name?"

"Cheese it!" impudently exclaimed the lad after a moment.

"What! What's that?"

"He said 'Cheese it!'" explained Mrs. Bowser as she laughed behind her hand.

"And you are giggling over it, of course! You can't understand that poverty and the want of human sympathy have made him what he is. Where do you live, sonny?"

"Rats!"

"Hey, what do you mean by that? Don't you understand what I mean? What street do you live on?"

"Oh, come off!" answered the boy as he turned away to chase the cat back down in the basement.

Mrs. Bowser had to giggle. No woman could have helped it. The first giggle set Mr. Bowser's ears to working back and forth, and at the second he rose and shouted:

"Yes, giggle and giggle and giggle, and be hanged to you! You can't see that you are encouraging the child in his impudence. You are disappointed because he wasn't found dead of cold and hunger at the gate. The boy is all right, only he is afraid of you."

"Then I'll go upstairs and you may question him some more."

"Sonny," said Mr. Bowser after she had disappeared, "I want you to understand that I am your friend. I have some pennies in my pocket, and if you will tell me where you live I will give them to you. What is the street?"

"Taffy!" grinned the boy.

"Look here, you young cub, but you are inclined to be impudent. I want you to answer me straight or out you go. What is your name?"

"Bug house!"

Draws Him Over His Knee.

Mr. Bowser reached for him and drew him over his knee. He forgot all about adoption and human sympathy. He was about to perform the old fashioned spanking act when two things happened at once. The kid fastened his teeth in the humanitarian's leg with a grip like that of an alligator, and the front door bell rang, and somebody drummed on the glass panel of the door outside. The boy was twisted down on the floor and the bell answered. The callers were a man and a woman—man and wife. They were not yet inside the hall when the man brandished his fists and shouted:

"You old child stealer! Where is my boy?"

"Yes, you villain, where is our Peter?" added the woman.

"W-what does all this mean?" asked Mr. Bowser as he stared at them.

"It means that we live five doors above here and that tonight you enticed our little son into your house. What have you done with him? Where is he? Bring him out at once or I'll knock that bald head off your shoulders!"

Claws the Air.

"And if he can't I'm the woman who can!" added the wife as she clawed the air.

Before Mr. Bowser could get things straight the boy came running past him into his mother's arms and gave him a kick to be remembered by, and then the three fled down the steps. When Mr. Bowser shut the door and turned round Mrs. Bowser was on the stairs. A smile of human sympathy was on her face, and as he flourished his arms around and tried to utter words she softly said:

"Yes, I think it would be a good plan to adopt him, and I promise to try to be a mother to him!" M. QUAD.

Dummy.

"Now, Maria, how do those boys know we are going to a whist party?"—New York Herald.

A Little in Doubt.

"I suppose you are glad to see the interest your boy takes in his books."

"Yes," answered Farmer Corntossel. "I shouldn't be surprised if one o' these days he knew as much as the college perfessors themselves. The only thing is that college perfessors don't look to me as if they got as much enjoyment out o' life as a lot o' people that haven't near as much knowledge."—Washington Star.

OUR EXPENSIVE PALATES.

Flavors and Gusto Help in the Process of Digesting Food.

Physiological chemists occasionally delight to tell us that we are the dupes of aesthetic senses and pleasing flavors. Men will pay, they say, half a guinea for a pint of turtle soup which, from a strictly nutritive point of view, is not worth a twentieth part of that sum. Oysters, we are told, are an extravagant form of food, since fourteen of them do not contain as much nourishment as a single egg, while it would require the ingestion of no less than 200 good oysters before protein equivalent of a pound of beef was reached. Caviare, again, is not to be compared with the bloater as regards its nutritive value; indeed, the latter "offers the largest amount of nutriment for a given sum of any animal food."

It is evident if we regard these conclusions seriously that a large section of the human race is wickedly indulgent, caring more for the palatable than the ntritious quality of food. The same appears to be true in regard to beverages, and even in case of cigars there is no difference, chemically speaking, between the penny Pickwick and the shilling Havana. The difference of eleven pence is paid for flavor alone. Physiologically, it is possible that a "brandy and soda" costing say one shilling is just as satisfactory as a "pint" of champagne at five shillings. Similarly it may be said that a pint of beer at sixpence is quite as good dietetically speaking as a small bottle of Chateau Margeaux at three shillings and sixpence.

There are, however, clearly instances in which in no sense can the nutritive equivalent of food and beverages be summed up in so many pounds, shillings and pence. How often is it found, for example, that the invalid may be tempted to take a few oysters in preference to a small beef fillet, or some turtle soup when calves' head, the basis of mock turtle, would scarcely appeal to him, even although it may be more than equal in nutritive value to the only reptile used to any extent as food in this country. When a person refuses to take a given food, however nutritious and wholesome it may be, because it is not tempting to the sight or the palate it is in many instances probable that if he struggles to overcome his fastidiousness such food may prove to tax his digestive functions and may even cause gastric trouble.

The chemical analysis of food and physiological experiments in the test tube do not take into account this psychical factor of digestion, for the digestive process is well begun when the sight of food is pleasing. On the contrary, when food does not appeal to the eye it is likely not to appeal to the stomach. It is hardly reasonable to conclude, therefore, that the price of flavor is always the price of luxury.—London Lancet.

THE NATURE WRITER.

We have just been entertainin' a gent who said his forte
Was huntin' game for stories—not killin'
it for sport—
He writes up yarns of grizzlies and porcupines and sich,
And at sellin' dope of that kind they say
he's gettin' rich.

He blamed near filled his notebook with yarns at Poker Bill's,
And then we said we'd take him to a bear
hunt in the hills,
Where he could study grizzlies and get more stuff to write
When the bear kind come a-troopin' to the water hole at night.

We had took a mountain lion that had been long stuffed and dead,
And we fixed it in a tree top, right above
the writer's head;
Then we hid him in the brushwood, when the moon was shinin' pale,
And we told him to stay quiet till the bears come down the trail.

Well, just at the proper moment, down
the lion comes, kerwhop!
On the shoulders of the workman from the literary shop;
There was one long yell of terror, and a streak right through the gloom
As the nature story writer give the mountain lion room.

So we're lookin' in the foothills for a gentleman that writes
And who got the ne plus ultry of conniption fits and frights,
And when we've found and roped him it will take some coin, by jinks,
Just to give this town of Cactus all that's due to it in drinks!
—Denver Republican.

Called.

The comedian boarder who owed five weeks' back pay was in one of those facetious moods.

"Madam," he chuckled, spearing a green strawberry and holding it above his saucer, "I understand that you entered the boarding house business merely to save enough money to become an actress. Am I right?"

The landlady stared at him coldly.

"Yes, Mr. Highball," she responded in rasping tones. "I am boarding beats at present so that I may be able to beat the boards later on."

And then the comedian boarder left the table without even finishing his dessert.—Chicago News.

S.S.S. DRIVES OUT RHEUMATISM

The cause of Rheumatism is a sour, acid condition of the blood, brought about by indigestion, chronic constipation, and the accumulation in the system of refuse matter which the natural eliminative organs have failed to carry out. This refuse or waste matter ferments and sours, generating uric acid which is absorbed into the blood and distributed to all parts of the body, and Rheumatism gets possession of the system. One may also be born with a predisposition or tendency to Rheumatism, because like all blood diseases it can be transmitted from parent to child. The aches and pains of the disease are only symptoms which you may scatter or relieve with liniments, plasters, blisters, etc., or deaden with opiates. As soon, however, as such treatment is left off or there is any exposure to cold or dampness, or after an attack of indigestion or constipation, the wandering pains, sore muscles and joints, and tender places on the flesh return, and the sufferer finds that he has merely checked the symptoms while the real cause of the disease remains in the blood. Rheumatism can never be cured while the blood remains saturated with irritating, pain-producing uric acid poison. S. S. S. cures Rheumatism by driving the cause out of the blood. It thoroughly cleanses the blood and renovates the circulation by neutralizing the acids and expelling all foreign matter from the system. S. S. S. stimulates and invigorates the blood so that instead of a weak, sour stream, constantly depositing acrid and corrosive matter in the muscles, joints, nerves and bones, the body is soothed and nourished by rich, health-sustaining blood, which completely and permanently cures Rheumatism. S. S. S. is composed of roots, herbs and barks which possess both purifying and tonic properties—just what is needed in every case of Rheumatism. CREW OF THE CRIMSON WASH THEIR COLORS TO YALE

Harvard Lost the Varsity Eight After oRwing a Splendid Race.

New London, Conn., June 28.—Dogging Harvard's wake for more than half the race, Yale plunged to the lead on the third mile and won by a little less than three-quarters of a length ahead, in their annual battle on the Thames last evening, in 21:10.

This gave Yale its eighth victory on the water since the old rivals renewed their permanent athletic relations, just eighteen years ago.

With the Thames unruffled, save for the swash of a few refractory craft which the harbor regulations were unable to control, and with the tide pouring full and strong, the eights were sent away from the drawbridge at the entrance to New London, and shoved their prows upstream to Bartlett's point, just opposite the Harvard quarters, for a finish which, while not sensationally close, was in doubt till the last stroke was rowed.

Lead Changes Many Times.

Harvard caught the water first. Yale wrestled the lead six times, only to lose it again, until the three and a half mile post was passed, when Yale's most splendid spurt was ordered. With sweeping strides the eight separated the slender lead between it and the Harvard boat until almost clear water shone between their prows. Time and again had Stroke Farley of Harvard wrested the lead back from Yale, only to have Boulton, the Yale stroke, send the stroke up a notch and get back the leadership.

The secret of Yale's victory lay in its ability to pass Harvard as long as the crews rowed the thirty-two stroke into which they both dropped for the main part of the race. To maintain its lead Harvard was forced to increase its stroke a notch, or to "count tens." Yale found itself with the most in reserve for the deadly spurt at the last half mile and it proved enough.

In point of spectators brought by visiting yachts and excursion trains the attendance figures eclipsed all records. The line of yachts which strung along the course from start to finish was the most brilliant and striking collection seen outside a cup defender's appearance and the observation trains on each side of the river were packed to their capacity. Fewer people than usual saw the race, however, because it finished six miles from this city in the shadow of the little hamlet of Montville and hardly a thousand people took the trouble to make the trip into the unsettled country to be present at the close.

Yale's official time was 21:10; that of Harvard 21:13.

Finish in Semi-Darkness.

The race was begun just as the last rays of the sun gilded the backs of the oarsmen, who reached out on their stretchers awaiting Referee Meikleham's word at 7:13 o'clock and finished by the sickly light of the moon and the gathering darkness. The line of yachts shut from view the shells to the spectators on the east shore, and because of the dusk, only a few thousand were able to see the crews obey the coxswain's cry, "Vast!" and "Stop rowing!"

Directly above the crews the crowded observation train on the drawbridge poured forth volley upon volley of Yale and Harvard Cheers as the two university launches steamed down the river at 6:45 o'clock, each with an eight-oared shell in tow. The oarsmen were seated in their shells by 7 o'clock, and paddled to the stake boat, which proved inaccurately fastened, and drifted badly. Three times Referee Meikleham called the crews back and relocated the stake boats before giving them the final pistol shot.

Harvard First in Water.

Harvard oars were first in the water and its shell went to the front. Harvard began rowing at a thirty-six and took a quarter length lead before the first quarter of a mile. The Yale stroke was sent to thirty-two it was able to maintain a thirty-six, the figure at which it rowed the first half mile, and veteran rowing critics wagged their heads ominously when they saw Yale at a stroke a notch lower than that of Harvard creep ahead. At the half mile Yale was less than a dozen feet behind. Yale dropped its stroke to thirty-two and Harvard kept at thirty-four and steadily went to the front. From the half mile to the one mile Harvard's work was the prettier and the most effective of the race. Dropping its stroke to thirty-two it was able a maintain a lead which never exceeded half a length. Passing the mile and a quarter Yale's stroke was raised to thirty-three and it pushed the Yale boat ahead by inches.

As the eights passed the mile and a half Yale had taken the lead for the first time in the race. Harvard would not be denied and as Yale dropped its stroke to thirty-one Harvard's pace of thirty-two sent it once more to the front. For a mile the crimson supremacy was maintained, but never more than a lead of a quarter length. As they passed the two and a half miles Yale's stroke was again elevated and its prow went past the post a few feet ahead.

The wearying Harvard oarsmen pulled themselves together for their final effort and sent their shell into first place with a spurt which called the last of their reserve energy. Rounding into the long lane of yachts around the finish Boulton drove the Yale eight to its supreme effort. The pace rose to thirty-six, while Harvard's caught up the challenge and met it stroke for stroke till the last quarter mile was reached. Faltering and weakening the Harvard oarsmen dropped the stroke to thirty-four and its ragged ness betokened an early collapse. By giant strides the Yale lead increased till it shot the shell over the line almost a length ahead.

Captain Ide Falters.

Captain Ide alone of the Yale crew faltered at the close of the race. A dash of water from Coxswain Barkalow revived him and he was upright again in an instant. Harvard's drooping eight sank bowed on their seats after having rowed the gamest race ever made by a losing Crimson crew. Severance and Faulkner dropped on the benches and for two or three minutes they could not be revived. Slowly they resumed their places, and both crews threaded their way from the maze of yachts echoing with their salutes to the victor across the river to their quarters.

The official time indicates that the lead which wavered between Yale and Harvard from the two and one-half to the three and one-half miles was so slender as not to be able to be recorded. It showed the eights tied in four of the eight half miles of the race. It follows:

	Yale.	Harvard.
Half mile	2:24	2:26
One mile	5:16	5:16
One and one-half miles	8:38	8:40
Two miles	10:41	10:43

Three miles	15:55	15:55
Three and one-half miles	18:32	18:32
Four miles	21:10	21:13

Winners Re-elect Leader.

After the race the Yale crew unanimously re-elected Charles Elliott Ide, of Syracuse, N. Y., captain for next year. He is a member of the academic class of 1908. He said last night: "It was the hardest I ever rowed. We were nose and nose the whole way to the last quarter mile. Then they couldn't hold us. I don't think anything could. Harvard had a splendid crew. I think it was even better than the crew that beat us last year."

John Richardson, of Chestnut Hill, Boston, Mass., was last night elected captain of the Harvard crew for next year. He rowed No. 7 today and No. 5 last season.

Coach Ray of the Harvard crew, said after the race. "Of course the better crew won and we have no complaint. The change of Lunt for Glass, caused by the illness of the latter, may have had some effect, but probably would not have changed the result."

Captain Bacon felt keenly the defeat of his crew and had nothing to say.

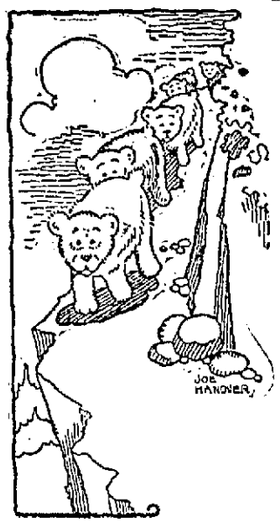
A Story of Five Little Bears.



Five little bears in the mountain;
One heard a lion roar!
It frightened him till he quickly died;
And then there were but four.

Four little bears in the mountain;
One fell from a great high tree!
He broke his neck as soon as he struck;
And then there were but three.

Three little bears in the mountain;
One fell some thin ice through;
But beneath the water was very deep!
And so there were but two.

Two little bears in the mountain;
They thought to have some fun.
One got too near to a precipice!
And then there was but one.

One little bear in the mountain:—
He was so lonely night and day,
That at last he emigrated
To a country far away.

MAUD WALKER.

Andy's Dream.

BY MAUD WALKER.

"Come, Andy; look lively there! It's half-past five. No sleeping after that time in the morning." And Andy, sleeping so soundly in his little bed in the low, unplastered room, half roused himself at sound of his Uncle Dan's rough voice. "Come, do you hear? I don't want to have to come up that break-neck ladder again to wake you. So out of there quick, or you'll wish you had."

Then a heavy step on the floor and a grumbling and panting as a heavy form lowered itself down a ladder, which was the only means of entrance to the attic room where Andy slept, pronounced Andy's uncle's exit.

Andy forced open his eyes still heavy with sleep. Then he dragged himself from his pillow and proceeded to dress. After a few minutes he went down the ladder—which his clumsy uncle, with his two hundred pounds, had found so difficult to descend—and sought the washbench in the back yard. He washed himself, combed his hair before a piece of broken mirror that hung in the kitchen porch, and then proceeded to the cow lot to milk three cows before breakfast. He found the milk pail on a table by the well.

As he drew the warm milk into the shining tin pail he began wondering for the hundredth time how long, oh, how long! it would be before his father should come for him and take him away from a life of drudgery. Over a year before this story opens Andy's father—a poor man—had determined to improve his fortunes by going to the gold fields of the far West. Andy's mother being dead his father had brought him to this uncle—his father's only brother—and arranged for Andy to live there till his return. The understanding between the two brothers was that Andy should help with the light chores about the house and barnyard, but that he should not have heavy work put upon him as he was a delicate boy and could not endure too much hard labor. His father also requested that he be sent to school regularly while it was in session.

But before Andy had been an inmate of his Uncle Dan's house a week (he had taken up his home there in the fall) he was kept from school on first one pretext and then another by his aunt, who felt no interest in the motherless little boy, who was indeed an orphan, now that his father was away in a new country where letters could reach him very rarely, and from where letters came even more rarely. And it always happened that no matter how hard Andy worked there was found a new job for him as soon as the one in hand was finished. So the months wore away, and the child became a veritable little beast of burden, seldom going to school a week together, and never having any childish pleasures at all.

While the uncle was not wholly a bad man, he had listened to his wife, who reasoned that Andy was delicate from too much fondling by his father, and that work—and plenty of it—would make him strong. As for school—well, he could get book-learning after his father came back. She could not afford to wash, iron and cook for a dependent. The boy must earn his bread at least.

And so Andy had worked from early dawn till dark six days in the week, going to school about three months all together during the year and a half that he had been an inmate in his Uncle Dan's home.

And now the summer was with them and the garden and fields were in glorious green, making rich promise of a fine harvest. But though Andy's uncle Dan and aunt Rachel were overjoyed at the prospect of so bounteous provender for the coming year they made no plans for Andy's schooling during the coming fall and winter. Nor did they get the child what necessary clothing he needed, but let him wear his uncle's cast-off farm clothing, which was, of course, about twice too large for him. Thus he was a deplorable and wretched sight in overalls rolled up about his slim little ankles and held in bagging folds about his body by means of a pair of home-made "galluses."

After breakfast on the morning of this story Andy's aunt sent him to an adjoining farm on an errand. He was to make the trip over the hills and back in a given time. And she gave him to understand he should suffer punishment if he loitered on the way.

The day was hot and the wind strong, and Andy, having put in three hours' hard work—such as milking, weeding the garden and cleaning out the stable yard—felt in no condition to make the three-mile walk in a given time; but with a basket on his arm he started out to do his best, his little body so tired that his heart, in sympathy with it, became very heavy indeed.

He reached the farm and told the good housewife there his errand. But before she took time to prepare him for his homeward journey she gave him a slice of bread and jelly and a glass of milk, declaring: "W'y, Andy, child, you look as thin as tissue paper an' as white as ashes. You're not strong 'nough to walk three miles without restin' a bit between. Come, you lay right down on my lounge an' rest while I have the hired man hitch up my horse an' buggy. I'm goin' to town today an' will drive you roun' to your own home. Peers to me some people can't see how delicate a child is, anyway."

Andy, really exhausted, thanked the good woman for her kindness, and knowing that he should have plenty of time to rest since she was going to take him home in her buggy, stretched himself on the cool floor—declaring his clothes were too much soiled to lie on her lounge—and proceeded to fall into a quiet nap.

Half an hour later the good woman came tip-toeing into the sitting room, dressed for her visit to town. She stooped over the prostrate Andy, and seeing him sound asleep, decided to step into another room and await his wakening. "He's that tired," sighed she, "that a little sleep in the forenoon will do him good." Then she went to the gate where the horse and buggy had been brought by the hired man, and leading the horse into the shade of a tree said: "We're waiting, Deck, for that poor little abused boy to have his sleep out."

And while he lay sleeping on the cool floor of the cosy farmhouse sitting-room Andy smiled sweetly, for a dream full of happiness was in his brain. He dreamed that his father had returned for him and that they were driving away from his uncle Dan's home to one of their own. He dreamed that his father was happy, for he had found the gold he had gone in quest of. Also, he dreamed that he—Andy—had on a nice new suit of clothes that fitted him like the clothes of the town boys fitted them. And their conveyance was a brand new "top buggy" drawn by a span of fine dapple grey horses, Andy's own, so his father declared.

But all things dear come to a close all too soon. And a fly buzzing about Andy's ear roused him from his precious dream to the hard reality of his real existence. He quickly arose and said aloud:

"Goodness, Aunt Rachel will thrash me good for staying away so long."

The farmer's wife, sitting dressed and hatted in the adjoining room, heard Andy's words and came into the sitting-room. "No, I shall explain to your aunt how you come to stay," she said. "But if you're rested we'd better go now. It's getting a bit along into the middle of the day."

Andy declared himself very much rested and went to the buggy with the good woman, whom he knew to be his sympathetic friend. As they rode over the country road Andy told her of his dream, sighing and saying: "Oh, how I wish that dream would come true some day."

"Maybe it will, Andy child," said the good woman, her heart throbbing with pity for the little orphan beside her. "But if it don't come true," she went on, "I'm going to see if I can't get your uncle to allow you to come and live with me. I'd send you to school along with my Tom and you could be his brother."

Tears filled Andy's eyes, but he bravely winked them back. He wished he might know how to tell this motherly woman beside him how much he appreciated her kindness and heartfelt sympathy, but he was just a little country-bred boy whose mother had not lived long enough to teach him the little ways of sincere expression, and his father had intrusted him to the hands of an aunt by marriage who cared nothing for the child himself, only coveting the work she could get out of him.

After depositing Andy at his own dooryard the good neighbor woman departed for town, nodding a "howdy-do" to Andy's aunt who came to the doorway in time to see Andy alight from the buggy. As Andy entered the house his aunt, frowning, asked: "Why did Mrs. Jones come over here with the buggy? Did you tell her you couldn't walk home, eh?"

"She was goin' to town," explained Andy, "and said I might rest awhile at her house and she'd bring me round home. I never asked her at all. But I was so tired she said I couldn't walk so far without restin'."

"Oh, she did, did she?" sneered Andy's aunt. "Well, do you see that you're fifteen minutes behind the time I set for you to be at home? And don't you remember that I told you if you didn't git back on time I'd have to punish you? Now, I don't intend to tell a falsehood. And neither do I intend for you to become disobedient, either. You may just as well understand right now that so long as you are a burden in this house you'll have to do as you're told to do or take the consequences. I'm mistress here, you little beggar. So you go and pretend to the neighbors that you're ill treated, do you?"

"Oh, no aunt, I never——"

"Don't dare to tell me a lie!" exclaimed the aunt. "And since I've got to punish you I might as well do it now so's I'll have time to git over it before churnin' time. You know how it always effects me to whip a great, big, ungrateful boy like you. Come——"

But before she finished the sentence a form shadowed the doorway, causing Andy and his aunt to look around quickly. With a leap of joy Andy was in his father's arms, weeping as though his little heart would break. The father had entered the yard unnoticed by either the irate woman or the frightened child, and stood a listener at the side door before entering. On recovering from his shock and anger he turned to his sister-in-law, saying: "Madam, in the future I shall cease to call you a relative or friend. I've heard your angry threats to my little and unoffending son and have seen into your ugly soul. I've come back from my adventures a rich man and my son shall no longer be the little beggar you call him. And, if after questioning him, I think I owe you anything for his accommodations—why, I'll settle the bill. But if, on the other hand, I find that you have wronged my motherless little Andy——well, beware. As for my brother, I shall expect to see him in town, where he will find me at the best hotel. I've engaged apartments there for Andy and myself till my plans for the future are developed. As for you madam, adieu."

And before Andy's aunt, overcome with confusion, could think of a way to pacify her rich brother-in-law he was gone, leading little Andy to a nice carriage that stood near the gate.

As father and son rode along over the dusty road, Andy, his heart full of happiness, said: "Father, I dreamed you'd come home to me, and that you'd come very rich, too."

"Yes, my dearest little man, your father's struck it all right. And now you will never eat the bitter bread of dependence any more. Your dream has come true, you see."

Queens of England.

Adelaide, queen consort of William IV., king of Great Britain and Ireland, was the eldest daughter of the Duke and Duchess of Meiningen, a state in Germany. Adelaide was born in the year 1792. She was truly pious, being so devout in her religious observances that she rarely took part in any of the simple and innocent forms of amusement so prevalent at that time in court circles. Indeed, it was this exemplary character which might be said to have won for her a king for a husband, for queen Charlotte of England, hearing of Adelaide's virtues, recommended her as a fitting companion for her third son, William, then duke of Clarence.

Queen Adelaide.

At Charlotte's suggestion negotiations for a marriage between her son and Adelaide were entered into. The match was speedily made, and the marriage took place in July, 1818.

Although Adelaide and William were the parents of several children, they all died in infancy. In 1830 George IV. died, and, having no children to succeed him, the crown reverted to his surviving brother, next in line, William.

During William and Adelaide's reign the court of England assumed a pure and elevating atmosphere, proving a model for the young, something which cannot be said of it at any former period.

In the year 1837 William IV. died, and as queen dowager Adelaide survived him twelve years. She was present at the marriage of the young and beautiful Queen Victoria and the charming Prince Albert. Much of her later life was spent in works of charity and religion. She also endeared herself to the people of England by the generous and upright course she pursued in regard to William's illegitimate children, taking them under her own supervision and doing all for them that she could have done had they been her own offspring.

During her life no word of calumny ever stained her name, and no act of selfishness can be laid to her door. Other queens there were who left their names more indelibly printed on the pages of history, but none were there more noble and true; none were better as woman, wife, queen and friend.

Big Bug's Wisdom. By William Wallace, Jr.

There had been a great rain, lasting a day and night; one of those rains that come down gently, but persistently, making rivers of streamlets and lakes of tiny ponds. The sun came out after the clouds had cleared away and smiled on everything so genially that Nature's heart throbbed with life and growth.

In the garden the vegetables nodded and smiled a "good-morning" to one another. In the barnyard the chickens clucked out their good spirits, old turkey gobbler strutting about like a veritable monarch. In the pasture the colts ran about in happy frolic, kicking up their heels till the damp earth flew about them in clods. Even the older animals—horses and cows—frisked about a bit to show their good feeling with things in general. Indeed, there is nothing finer than a good summer rain to cool the earth, wash away dust, feed the vegetation and purify the atmosphere when it is followed by brilliant sunshine with a stiff breeze.

And so thought a band of little bugs that had hidden beneath a bunch of fine potato foliage to shelter themselves from the recent rain. But now that the sun was out the little bugs peeped from their leafy house and one of them said:

"Gee, buggies, it's as fine a June day as I ever saw! Come, stir out of this dark place and get into the open. Pshaw! how stiff my legs are after staying still so long." And the speaker, a fine fat fellow, crept out from the clump of growing green into the glare of sunlight.

"Well, I must have a bite of breakfast before I wander forth," declared another bug, beginning to climb one of the soft, green, potato stalks to whose roots were growing a cluster of fine potatoes. "I'll take a bit of leaf—the softest one I can find—before I'm off for any pastime." And he fell at once to eating with a relish one of the many tender green leaves through whose agency the potatoes in the ground were fed with sun and moisture.

"I'm with you," acquiesced another bug. Then the idea of breakfast determined all to eat before playing. But the big bug—who seemed to be the leader of the crowd—remained sunning himself outside the shadow of the potato foliage, stretching first one leg and then another, he felt so cramped from their long disuse.

And while he sat there sunning himself and taking a few physical culture exercises the big bug heard a sound which frightened him a bit. But he was not a coward and kept his ground till something more than sound should become evident.

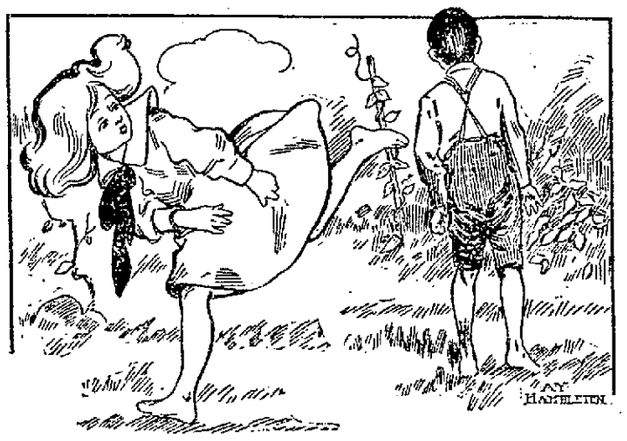
But before we go further with the story it must be told that the present place of habitation was a new one for this crowd of bugs. They had been great travelers, coming over the hills and the valley by stages. With the arrival of the first warm spring days they had come from somewhere (the place has not been located) into the garden lands of a beautiful farming region. There they had found food and fresh dew in plenty to nourish them as they traveled still further on. In fact, they could not rest till they had reached the place that sent forth that sweet, peculiar odor which only their acute sense of smell could detect. It was the potato odor that attracted them. And so they had traveled the long and weary way, finding the delicious spot they were in quest of just before the heavy rain began to fall.

And now let us return to the big bug and the sound he heard which frightened him. There he sat, quieting his legs and straining his ears. And the sound did not diminish, but became louder and louder. This is what he heard:

"Ah, Sally, lookie at the tomato vines! Haven't they growed powerful tall since the rain?"

"Ugh, I should say so. But—lookie at the beets! And lookie at the potatoes! Oh, we'll soon have all the potatoes we can eat. Le's go into the patch and look at 'em. I saw mamma dig underneath the potato vines the other day an' get out a pan full of nice potatoes, an' she never broke a single vine, neither. She said she could get potatoes for us to eat and still not kill the vines."

The big bug listened. Then he began to think it time to warn his company that danger was near. He crept back beneath the vines just as he saw two children coming down a little furrow that lay between two rows of potato hills. They were advancing in his direction. But to him these two little folk appeared to be most frightful giants. Their tread on the damp earth made such a roar that it almost deafened him. As fast as he could he went up the potato vines to a spot directly to the very vine where the bugs were and began looking for them. His quick blue eyes soon detected the shining striped red coats of the round little many-legged fellows as they tried to get out of his sight. "Aw," said Tom, looking at them. "So you're eating up our potatoes, are you? Well, I'll just go tell mama, and she'll set some one to work killing you, she will."



"Ugh! Let's run," and the little miss fairly flew out of the potato patch.

Then for the first time in his life the big bug found his voice of such power that he could speak to the giant that threatened him. Coming into plain view he turned his shining little specks of eyes on Tom and said in a queer, squeaking voice: "Great Monster, with but two legs, why would you take our lives for eating these fresh leaves?"

Tom was almost taken off his feet when he heard himself addressed by a potato bug. But the novelty of such a thing appealed to him sufficiently strong to prevent his running away. Indeed, Tom had more grit and curiosity than he had fear. So he stood his ground and replied:

"Because these potatoes are ours, you impudent bug. And you'll kill them if we allow you to eat all the leaves off. So it's more on with you or take a little dose of something what you wouldn't like," answered Tom.

"But how do you come to own all these vines?" asked the big bug. "We are born in the world to live, and can't starve while food is in sight."

"Well, you'll have to look for it elsewhere," declared Tom. "My father plowed and planted this garden and it's ours. So there's no use arguing the question with you. Do you mean to be off? Or shall I take a clod and smash you?"

"Suppose, Great Monster, that another as much more powerful than you, as you are more powerful than me, should come and drive you out with a threat to smash you if you refused to go. Would you call that just?" And the big bug looked very seriously at Tom as it waited for an answer.

"Well, I hadn't thought of it that way," admitted Tom. "But, friend bug, as you did nothing to make these potatoes grow you should understand that you have no right to eat them up. My father has worked and worked to get this nice patch of potatoes, and now we cannot let you and your wife and children, and kinsfolk come in and strip the stalks of the leaves. Of course, we don't like to—to—harm a hair on your heads, but we can't let you eat up our vegetables."

"Well, since you have explained to me that your father has prepared this nice field for you I'll have my comrades accompany me further into the world. We have no fixed place of abode, and must be driven about before winds and weather. But this I promise you, Great Monster, we'll take ourselves off without delay if you'll not harm us."

"Sure, go right on," said Tom gaily. "You're a nice sort of old bug, anyway, and I have a good deal of respect for you. I know bugs and worms have the worst of it; for, after all, they're made to eat like we are. I guess, though, you'll find plenty to eat down by the river. There're soft leaves of every kind, except potatoes, of course. And now, I'm going to the house to tell my mother and sister that I've heard a bug talk. They'll not be able to believe it, but it's so just the same. And another thing, Mr. Bug, I want you to know that from now on I'll think in a very different way about bugs. After all, they were created, and should be treated with consideration. So goodby, old fellow. Good luck to you and your wife and children. But beware—don't ever go near another potato patch again if you value your heads. Everyone wouldn't listen to your story as I have done."

Then Tom ran away and the big bug called to his comrades to follow him. As they marched single file out of the potato patch the big bug said: "With a little common sense and a bit of bravery even a common bug may have his life spared. Had I crawled under the leaves as you each did we would have met with a terrible fate. I ran some risks, I'll admit, but a battle is never won without great chances being taken."

"He was a right decent monster, though," said one of the bugs, speaking of Tom. "He might have killed you with one point of his mighty foot."

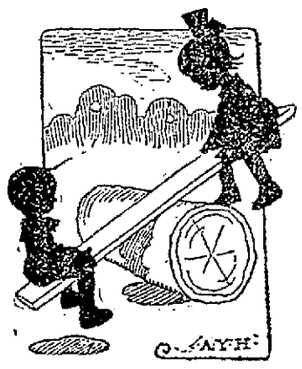
"Ah, a miss is as good as a mile," laughed the big bug.

Then they turned in the direction of the river, and when half an hour later Tom brought Sally to the patch to see if the talking bug were still there on the potato vine, there was not even a trace of him left. "Aw, I'm sorry he's gone," said Tom. "He was so funny, he was. Just think of it—a talking bug!"

GREEDY TIM.

Little Tim, a greedy boy,
Ate too much of cake.
He went to bed and thought he'd die
With a cramping stummie ache.

TEETER-TOTTER.



Teeter-totter in the air:
Up you go so high.
Then you come to earth again
With the merry cry:—
"Teeter-totter
Bread and water!
Also cake and pie.
Teeter-totter
Bread and water;
Go we to the sky!" T. T.

LIMERICK.

There was a small boy from the West
Who said, "I'm most awfully drest
In a fine suit of clothes,
And nobody knows
They're my old ones dampened and prest."

NOT HER AFFAIR.

The following conversation took place between a railroad traveler and the train conductor:

"I shall have to ask you for a ticket for that boy, ma'am," said the conductor, holding his hand for a ticket.

"I reckon not," answered the woman, not budging.

"Indeed you must pay for him," insisted the conductor. "He's too large to be traveling free. He occupies an entire seat and you must pay for it."

"I can't help that," snapped the woman.

"See here, madam, I've no time to argue the matter. If you don't produce a ticket for that boy or pay his fare I'll have to put him off the train." And the conductor glared in a determined way at the woman.

"Put him off, then," said the woman. "He's nothing to me. I never saw him before today."

HIS ABLE DECISION.

Justice as It Was Dealt Out In a Certain Village.

The mayor of a village in a western state, under a law by which the mayor is also police judge, had before him a cattle stealing case.

Two men had stolen two steers and sold them to a butcher in the town for the extremely low price of $37.

Now, the jurisdiction of this mayor-police judge extended in such cases only to the limits of petty larceny, which required that the stolen articles be not of a value of more than $35. Beyond this amount the magistrate had to bind the prisoner or prisoners over to the circuit court, subject to the action of the next session of the grand jury. Likewise, in cases thus beyond his jurisdiction, the judge got no fee, and at this particular time, as at many others, he needed the money.

When the evidence had all been adduced the case was as plain as the proboscis on an elephant seen in profile. The men had stolen the cattle, had sold them for $37. No amount of questioning could make the butcher who had bought them say that it was $34.50 or any other amount short of the originally mentioned sum. Apparently no mayor's fee was in sight.

Then the mayor thus summed up the case:

"We have heard the evidence in this case, and the duty of the court is clear. These men stole the cattle. They sold them for $37. Taking the mere prima facie evidence and the bare letter of the law, it would seem that it was a clear and unmistakable case of grand larceny. But I have decided to allow the two prisoners $4 for driving the cattle in to the market. This reduces the selling price to $33, and I fine the two prisoners each $20 and costs. The court is adjourned."—Chicago News.

One day one of Aunt Mary's patrons broached the subject to her and suggested that she should not encourage her husband's laziness by supporting him in idleness, but Aunt Mary protested.

"'Deed, honey, mah ole man ain't lazy," she declared; "it's des dem scientific notions he dun got when he was a-wuckin' at de college."

"But what have scientific theories got to do with his not working?" the lady demanded.

"Got er whole lot ter do, honey," Aunt Mary said, gathering up her basket. "Yo' see, dem ideas what he got was dat bit wasn't healthy ter wuck after meals, an' he ain't been able ter figger out no way ter 'complish dat, not yet—'less he gibs up eatin', an' course he can't do dat."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Distressing Mistake!

The Literal Victim.

They stood pensively on the platform of the toy railroad station at the beautiful suburb Bensonville.

"I understand you clearly," said the victim. "You told me that the property was but a stone's throw from the station. Where is it?"

"It's just up the road a bit," replied the real estate man.

"But it should be right here. You said a stone's throw."

"Yes."

"Now, see here, sir," cried the victim testily, "you know blamed well that a stone can't throw."—Harper's Weekly.

How Long Will It Stay There?

There are times when I am blue,
And, you bet, I hate 'em too.
There are times when there's no joy in anything,
When dark clouds come 'cross my sky,
When I almost want to cry,
When I cuss, instead of praise, the birds that sing,
But that's when I'm busted flat,
When I'm realizing that
I'm right up against the commonest of woes,
But it's just the other way;
There's no night—it's all bright day—
If I only have a dollar in my clothes.

There is nothing quite so sad
To one almost always glad
Than to know his pockets don't contain a cent.
All his cheerfulness will fade,
Into deep despair he'll wade,
And he'll wonder where on earth his money went,
But the sun will shine once more,
Shine as brightly as before,
And he'll feel a tinge of joy clear to his toes
When the time arrives that he
Can dig where his coin should be
And discover he's a dollar in his clothes.

STOCKS AND BONDS.

The Day on Wall Street.

New York, June 28.—Opening prices of stocks showed general advances on a fair volume of business. The low priced stocks were most prominent in the rise. St. Paul, Erie, Southern Railway and American Car gained large fractions.

The slight gains established at the opening were wiped out when selling orders appeared and the list eventually sagged to fractionally below yesterday's closing. Later on there was a moderate absorption which carried the leaders back to about where they opened or above, but the market did not hold rigidly and activity diminished.

Buying was renewed after a dull period and prices rose to a higher level than before. This made gains of three for St. Paul preferred, 2 for Minneapolis, St. Paul & Sault Ste Marie preferred and Reading and Lake Erie second preferred, 1¼ for Brooklyn Transit and 1 for Atchison, Great Northern preferred, Southern Railway and United States Realty. The eight per cent money rate was an influence in the activity. Bonds were irregular.

There was a marked increase in the demand for stocks after midday and prices rose rapidly in all directions. The principal dividend paying stocks were bought heavily, especially the Grangers and Pacifics. Many stocks advanced a point or more.

The market closed weak and dull. The news of the failure of the New York city bond offering was followed by a general throwing over of stocks by the traders. The gains were wiped out, but losses did not reach important proportions. The flurry in call money aggravated the depression in the market.

Charles Boyer has resigned the position of day baggagemaster at the Nickel Plate depot and has accepted a position with American Express company. Mr. Boyer has been baggagemaster for the Nickel Plate about six months. Pervious to that service he was employed at the freight house of the company and for two years was the night foreman there. He has been succeded by Henry Hille, who resigned the position of night baggagemaster at the Wabash depot for that purpose. Mr. Hille has been connected with the baggage department of the Wabash about twelve years and he was previously employed in the car repairing and inspecting department two or three years. By reason of his long service at the depot, he is known to all of the traveling men and many occasional travelers, who have been impressed with his courteous maner and treatment when having baggage checked. No successor to Mr. Hille had been named up to 3 o'clock this afternoon, but it is likely that one of the men at the depot will be promoted.

PIPEFITTERS GAIN A POINT.

The feature of most interest in the situation at the Wabash pipe and tin shop today is the entire absence of workmen with the exception of Foreman Louis Neuroth. The strikers succeeded last night in inducing the five men who were at work in the pipe shop to quit work. Fred C. Kraushaar, chairman of the grievance committee, said this morning that he had information from along the line stating that the only pipefitters at work were three men at Springfield and a telegram from that city stated that these men would not report for duty tomorrow. The company, Mr. Kraushaar says, has not made an effort to get pipefitters in the Moberly shops and none have been at work there since the beginning of the strike.

PENNSY ENGINE OUTPUT.

Nine engines received general repairs and two engines received repairs which required the removal of their drivers and a good portion of their machinery at the Pennsylvania shops during the five days ending today. The engines receiving the lighter repairs were Nos. 38 and 39, which were en route from the builder to Manitoba, where they are to be delivered to the Canadian Pacific. Their bearings became overheated and damaged badly. The other engines repaired were Nos. 7483, 7854, 7695, 7388, 7550, 7363, 7444, 7184 and 7387. The shops will be closed tomorrow on account of the annual excursion to Rome City of the company's employes.

NO LOW RATES AFTER SUNDAY.

Railroads operating west of Pittsburg will abolish all second-class passenger rates Sunday, in accordance with an agreement reached some weeks ago by the Central Passenger association. This stand has been taken on account of the 2-cent fare laws in states between Pittsburg and Chicago. For the present this new ruling will affect only lines operating in western Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois, but will likely become general within the next few months. Representatives of the Trunk Line Passenger association will meet in New York next week and will probably abolish all second class rates for the lines east of Pittsburg.

NEW ROSTER FOR FIREMEN.

The annual election of A. G. Porter lodge, No. 141, Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Engineers, which has been in progress through the mail system of voting, ended last night, when the canvassing board counted the votes and announced the result, which was as follows: Master, J. W. Fugate; vice master, H. O. Dermody; secretary, N. A. Peltier; collector, C. B. Whitman; treasurer, C. I. Hale; trustee, J. E. Hoog; medical examiners, Drs. F. M. Enslen and C. B. Stemen.

WILL BUILD NEW FACTORY.

Gruber & Bengs have served notice upon W. Harden, who conducts a foundry business on the lot adjoining the boiler shop that the lease, which will expire soon, will not be renewed. Gruber & Bengs want the ground for an extension of their own works and will erect upon it a building 90x62 feet and equip it with all the latest machinery for doing the class of work in which the company is engaged.

FRANK ROBINSON DEAD.

Frank A. Robinson, a son of Nelson Robinson, of Eel River township, died of tonsilitis at his home in Peru Tuesday night. He was 26 years old and is survived by the father, a wife, four brothers and two sisters. He was a member of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and of the Odd Fellows' lodge. The funeral services were held at Peru Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

ELECTRIC LIGHTS' PAY DAY.

On account of the holiday, the employes of the Fort Wayne Electric company will receive their semi-monthly wages next Wednesday, the 3rd. Ordinarily the men are paid on the 5th and 20th of the month. They will appreciate the favor the company extends to them this month.

Mrs. Anna Nelson, mother of Engineer W. D. Nelson, of the Pennsylvania, will go to Chicago tomorrow for a visit with relatives.

Apprentice A. W. Collis, of the Pennsylvania machine shop, will enter upon a two weeks' vacation Sunday, when he will go to the lakes.

Next Sunday Bernard Coyler, a machinist in the air brake room of the Pennsylvania shop, will go to Pittsburg to remain two weeks.

Aric Johnson is a new employe with Foreman H. C. Lepper, of the blacksmith shop at the Electric works. He came from Milwaukee.

Pennsylvania Fireman E. S. Hoffman is preparing for a visit with relatives and friends in Mansfield, O. He will be accompanied by his wife.

Ed J. Lindamann, a clerk at the Pennsylvania offices for seventeen years, has resigned and takes a position with Strauss Brothers, Toledo.

Charles Steger, clerk for Master Mechanic J. J. Muir, of the Bass works, resumed work this morning after a few days pleasure trip in Michigan.

R. X. Getty had a gash cut to the bone in the index finger of his right hand while at work in the Wabash shops this morning. Dr. Kaadt attended him.

Engine Inspector B. Hawk, at the Wabash round house, and his two daughters, will soon leave on a pleasure trip to the east, to be gone about two weeks.

P. Sachreiter, H. Albright, Ed Beldon, H. Korte, J. Freeland, P. Patrl, H. Zeperling and B. L. Larimore resigned positions at the Wabash shops this morning.

John Krauder has returned from Decatur, Ill., where he received treatment in the Wabash railway hospital for an affection of the eyes. He is greatly improved.

William Potthoff, private secretary to Supt. J. B. McKim, resumed that duty this morning. With his bride, Mr. Potthoff returned from the wedding trip last evening.

Ed Mullen, a conductor on the Denver and Rio Grande road, is spending a few days with his relatives and friends in this city. He was formerly employed on the Pennsylvania.

Ed Kaiser, of the Pennsylvania erecting shop, will be the guest of his sister at South Bend over the Fourth. Mrs. Kaiser and the children will accompany Mr. Kaiser on the journey.

Next Sunday the G. R. & I. Northland limited, which has been running semi-weekly, will become a daily train, the travel having increased to the point where such a service is necessary.

Charles A. Dunkelberg, of the Bowser company, has returned from Atlantic City, where he represented the firm in the display made at the conventions of the Master Mechanics and Master Car Builders.

Assistant Master Mechanic R. Breese and Boiler Foreman B. F. Sarver, of the Pennsylvania, have returned from Columbus, O., where they were called a few days ago on business for the company.

J. D. Bryan, a machinist at the Pennsylvania round house, accompanied by his wife and child, left last night for New York and other eastern cities, where they will spend a week or two in sight-seeing.

Brakeman George Rhodes, who had been in the St. Joseph hospital three weeks, is now at his home greatly improved. His progress towards recovery has been a very agreeable surprise to his friends.

Foreman J. A. Foster, of the air brake department of the Pennsylvania shops, will take a two weeks' vacation, which he will spend in the east. With his wife and children he will leave Sunday night for Pittsburg.

Passenger Conductor R. P. Evans is on duty again on the G. R. & I., after a pleasant two weeks' visit with relatives and friends in eastern and central Ohio. He was accompanied on the trip by his wife and daughter.

Henry Zollinger, who had charge of the work of equipping the Pennsylvania coal docks at Alliance with machinery, has completed that task and this morning returned home to take up his duties in the carpenter department.

Among the shipments to be made from the Bowser works early next week will be two immense flat tanks of 10,000 gallon capacity each to a firm in Chicago, whose establishment was in part destroyed by fire recently.

Charles E. Pask, Perry Wenger and Herbert Coverdale, Purdue students, are special apprentices in the signal department of the Pennsylvania, under Supervisor G. W. Hill. The young men will work until the arrival of the time for opening school next fall.

R. J. Lyons, who has been making the examinations of the Pennsylvania firemen, practically completed the work today. He will set apart a day in the near future in which he will examine any that may have been missed during the past two weeks.

The Rolling mills will be closed for repairs next week and arrangements have been made to pay the employes Saturday, which will be welcomed by them, as it will give them an opportunity to make plans for the Fourth, with nothing to interfere with them.

J. H. McClellan has been transferred from the engine cleaning gang to the boiler department of the Pennsylvania roundhouse to work as a helper, the change being accompanied by an increase in wages. He has gone to Rome City to spend a week before he takes up his new duties.

It will be interesting to many Pennsylvania employes who are acquainted in Wellsville either through a residence there or by frequent visits in the interest of the company to know that the city "went dry" at the recent election. Wellsville has a population of about 9,000 and had 108 saloons.

SMALL BOY SHOT PLAYMATE.

Gun Was Left Laying in a Very Reckless Manner.

Edward Chapman, the young son of Mr. and Mrs. Clark Chapman, of 53 Dwenger avenue, was accidentally shot about 4 o'clock Thursday afternoon by his play-fellow, Kenneth Betts, a son of Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Betts, who reside over the Dewey store on Columbia street. The boys were in the grocery, and the Betts boy picked up a rifle that had been used in the morning to kill rats, and pointing it at young Chapman, pulled the trigger and shot him. The charge, which was a light one, pierced the skin and the physicians soon had the boy comforted. He was later taken to his home. Mr. Betts stated that the gun had been around there for years, but had never been used.

Girl Let Chance Decide Which Shall Submit to Surgeon First.

St. Paul, June 28.—"Let's match pennies," said Dorothy Snyder, and Emma, her sister, agreed. It was to see which one should go to the operating table first in a hospital yesterday.

The pennies were thrown on the bedclothes, and as the result Emma was operated upon first.

The sisters, who live in St. Authony Park, were stricken with appendicitis Wednesday. Dorothy's operation immediately followed that of her sister. Both are doing well.

HOW CAN I FORGET?

I remember, I remember,
When I was but a lad,
Down on the old plantation,
What jolly joys I had!

I used to milk the seven cows,
And swill the sixteen motherly sows,
And give the eighteen horses oats,
And shuck the corn for thirty shoats,
And fork the hay for fifty head
Of cattle black and brown and red,
And fodder seven hundred sheep
Each night before I went to sleep.

Ah, those were happy seasons
When I was but a lad!
I had so many reasons
For being gay and glad!

I used to rise at three o'clock
And feed the seven sorts of stock
And chop eleven cords of wood
Before my appetite was good,
And after breakfast dig a ditch
Till all my muscles got the twitch,
And hoe the cotton afternoons
Along with six or seven coons.

Oh, what a sweet existence,
How jammed with daily joy,
Away off in the distance,
When I was but a boy!

For even after supper time
Up in the loft I used to climb
And fork down forty tons of hay
To feed the animals next day,
And after that—ah, chiefest joy
For any happy hearted boy!—
I turned the grindstone (such repose!)
To sharpen forty-seven hoes.

I remember, I remember,
Those boyhood pleasures yet,
Down on the old plantation!
Ah, how can I forget?

—Robertus Love in Judge.

His Absent Ducal Mind.

The Grand Duke of Saxe-Weimar, who is the next heir of Queen Wilhelmina, is a wealthy young prince, twenty-eight years of age, unmarried and has in Germany a reputation for perpetrating "bulls." Once while visiting a public school he noticed two boys of striking similiarity in appearance.

"Why, what a remarkable likeness!" he exclaimed. "These lads must surely be twins!"

"Yes, your royal highness," remarked the principal, and he beckoned the two frightened youngsters to him.

"Ah," said the prince, placing his hand on the head of one of them, "what is your name?"

"Heinrich."

"And how old are you?"

"Six," answered the boy.

"And you?" he said, turning to the other lad.—Harper's Weekly.

Why She Died.

Teacher (to class in Shakespeare)—Now, Henry, what was the cause of Cleopatra's death?

Pupil—Indigestion.

Teacher (angrily)—Henry Perkins! What do you mean by giving me such an absurd answer?

Pupil—Well, anyway, she died because she had a bite before retiring.—Boston Evening Transcript.

Proper For Him.

"You announced the text of your sermon," said the cranky old deacon, "as 'Let not your right hand know what your left hand doeth.'"

"Well?" replied the new minister.

"Well, it should have been, 'Let not your left hand know what your right hand doeth.'"

"But I'm left handed."—Catholic Standard and Times.

Described Him Exactly.

"You're looking for new quarters, aren't you?" inquired Kidder at the breakfast table.

"Yes," replied the talkative boarder.

"Why?"

"Here's an ad. in the paper that should interest you particularly: 'To rent; nice room for gent with gas.'"—Philadelphia Press.

The Way to Keep Posted.

"You must read a great many books to keep so well acquainted with current publications?"

"No," answered Miss Cayenne. "I don't take time to read books. It would interfere with the constant study of the advertisements that is necessary to keep really informed."—Washington Star.

Naive.

Mamie—There were three opera glasses leveled on me from the left box in the last act.

Mazie—Was I on then?

Mamie—Yes.

Mazie—Then how could any one see you?—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Quite Likely.

"Some doctors contend that onions are good for weak nerves. Did you ever hear that?"

"No, but I can readily imagine that they'd be good for a weak breath."—Atlanta Constitution.
